'OVERCHARGE' BY CODMAN REVEALED

The Codman Hill Construction Co. overcharged the George Robert White Fund by $1 a yard on "an enormous amount of concrete" used on a $75,000 waterproofing job, according to testimony today before the finance commission.

With the aid of an attractive girl witness, special counsel George R. Farnum of the Finance Commission brought out the story of the alleged overcharges.

Shortly afterward Major Roswell G. Hall, manager of the White Fund, who has been under Farnum's fire for three days, acknowledged hearing the testimony and confessed it amazed him.

The waterproofing job at 190-200 Boylston street was one of many repair jobs which the Codman Hill concern got from the White Fund without competitive bidding.

The company did some $400,000 worth of business for the city in three years and all of it is now under investigation.

BRINGS RECORDS

Miss Mary Horrigan of Haven avenue, Mattapan, bookkeeper for the J. P. O'Connell Company, which deals in contractors' supplies and materials, was the girl witness called by Attorney Farnum.

While Major Hall left the witness chair she took his place and said she had brought subpoenaed records.

These, she said, showed the Codman Hill Construction Company bought four types of mixed concrete for the waterproofing job,

Franklin, Ethel Quit Maine Retreat for Montreal

The couple has been reported as scheduled to sail from Montreal for Europe tomorrow. They came her last Saturday, motoring from New York, and remained in seclusion. Roosevelt advised friends he believed he and his wife were entitled to privacy while here.

ROOF REFUGE SAVED HER

440,000-VOLT SHOCK KILLS 4 ME. WORKMEN

Oldtown, Me., July 9 (AP)—Four employes of the Penobscot Chemical Fibre Co., working on a company dam and power plant on the Penobscot river, were killed today when a derrick boom came in contact with a high tension wire.

The men killed were Edwin Tyler and George and Romaine Shorette, all of Bradley, and Ernest Pelkey of the Great Works section of Old Town.

The bodies of all four were badly burned by current, making immediate identification difficult.

Plant employes said the line with which the derrick came in contact carried a voltage of 440,000, and ran from the Veazie Dam of the Bangor Hydro-Electric Company to the fibre plant.

The derrick, on the Bradley end of the dam, was used for lifting timbers used in the construction job. A wire cable ran from the derrick pulley to a boom.

As the boom swung around in one of the first operations today, the cable contacted the high voltage wire.

U. S. Tax Evaded by Morgenthaus, Fish Charges

Washington, July 9 (INS)—In a warm session of the Congressional Tax Committee today, Representative Hamilton Fish, (R.) of New York, demanded investigation of the income tax returns of members of the Roosevelt family, of Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and his father, and other administration figures and contributors to the Democratic campaign fund.

Fish said that he was informed that Morgenthau and his wife held

Nation Cheering For Teacher in Saugus Fight

With her fight for retention as a Saugus high school teacher headed for the courts, pretty Isabella Hallin today tackled the pile of mail she has received from all parts of the nation, encouraging her in her battle.

She announced that she is not interested in offers from movie and dancing school agents she has received unless she loses her fight for reinstatement.

"I feel it my duty to the people of Saugus who are supporting me to remain at the school," said the pretty blonde. "But if my fight fails then I certainly shall be interested in Hollywood."

HINTS AT MARRIAGE

Letters received by Miss Hallin have come from men, women, youths and girls in all walks of life, some of them even hinting at marriage. From a Baltimore woman a letter was received, reading:

"I am interested in the outcome of your present school trouble. If all teachers were shadowed in their social life, and some only home habits, our schools would be without many of the present-day school teachers.

"Discretion should be shown, regardless of sex. Men teachers surely have the lead in habits. Why not be sure those who condemn have no faults and their

Death Again Strikes Costas, Boy Drowns

For the fourth time in three months, de[illegible] struck at the Costa family of [illegible]askell street, Lexington, today, and for the third time claimed a victim.

He was the brother of Alice and Paul Costa, who were slain in South Boston in April when the brother of Dr. Charles E. Mackey of the Boston School Committee ran amok with a pistol.

Another sister, Evelyn, despondent over the deaths of this pair, allegedly tried to kill herself with a poison potion, but she recovered.

The youngster who died today had gone to the reservoir with several other boys to escape the heat. He was swimming but a short time when his companions heard him scream. Then he sank in only three feet of water.

Firemen had brought a pulmotor to the scene. Desperately they worked over the limp form for nearly an hour, in vain.

Doctors said that they were not certain whether the boy had suffered a heart attack while in the water or whether he had drowned, after suffering a cramp. An autopsy will determine that.

Wheeler Opens Fight on Deal's Court Bill

Washington, July 9 (AP)—Senator Wheeler (D.) of Montana opened his attack on the administration's court bill in the Senate today with an assertion that never before had he seen "such an appeal to the prejudices of the people" as had been made in support of the measure.

Long before the session started, long lines of spectators were standing outside the gallery doors, despite the heat, waiting for a chance to go in.

Before beginning his argument, Wheeler put into effect his expressed intention to permit the Senate to transact no business, outside of privileged matters as long as the administration clamped down strict rules on debate.

Crazed by Heat, Shoots Mother

Armonk, N. Y., July 9 (AP)—A middle-aged woman, said by police to have become crazed by the heat, critically wounded her aged mother and ended her own life with a pistol here today.

A servant found the body of Miss Anna Dienst, 43, and the critically wounded mother, Mrs. Anna Dienst, 77, at the residence shortly before noon.

HEAT STRUCK HIM DOWN

Stifling heat from sun-baked North End streets was too much for this boy, who collapsed outside his home. His father is carrying him to a cooler spot, to administer first aid. Hardest hit by this week's weather have been persons like the prostrated youngster living in congested sections of the city.

EAST WIND TO RESCUE, TORRID SPELL WANES

Once more the east wind came to the rescue of heat-ridden Boston today, tempering the heat wave so that by afternoon the thermometer was ten degrees lower than at a similar period yesterday.

The four days of torrid weather, however, had claimed lives of 33 persons in New England, either through heat or drowning, and suffering was still intense in congested sections.

Yet the relief experienced from the breezes that blew in from the ocean gave hope that the end of the heat-wave was near.

Officially, the weather bureau expected a maximum temperature for the day of no more than 90 degrees as contrasted with a record-making high mark of 99 yesterday and 93 the day before.

From midnight to nine o'clock this morning there was every indication that the day would be the hottest yet, but the east wind soon changed that.

Whereas at 9 a. m. it was 82, two degrees higher than the same hour yesterday, by 1 p. m. it was only 84—ten degrees lower than that hour yesterday.

Readings continued comparatively the same through noontime.

PLANES SCAN SEAS AGAIN IN RAIN

San Francisco, July 9 (AP)—As navy fliers from the battleship Colorado extended their search for Amelia Earhart and Fred Noonan into the Phoenix Islands area today, in spite of tropical rain squalls, first official word came that United States authorities are convinced the missing fliers have communicated with the outside world since their crash.

Lieut. Frank Johnson, San Francisco Coast Guard communications officer, said today he was confident carrier wave signals heard Saturday and Sunday nights came from the lost plane.

Johnson said asserted "code" messages had been discarded because neither Amelia nor her navigator, Fred Noonan, could send accurately in code.

DOUBT VOICE MESSAGES

"We know the carrier wave signals received Saturday and Sunday night originated great distances from San Francisco," Johnson said. "Had they been faked by a transmitter on the coast, we could have easily localized them, and Honolulu could have done the same, through triangulation.

NOT AMATEUR RANGE

"It is not likely any amateur would operate on the Earhart frequency which is assigned mostly to aircraft."

Triangulation of Sunday's carrier waves by the Coast Guard and Pan-American Airways in Honolulu switched the search from north of Howland Island southward to the Phoenix islands group.

Rain Squalls Threaten To Halt Air Search

Honolulu, July 9 (AP)—Equtorial rain squalls threatened today to interrupt the search for Amelia Earhart, which navy airmen considered was entering its crucial phase.

Despite a forecast of rain and poor visibility, officers aboard the battleship Colorado planned to catapult her three planes aloft

Today and Saturday, they felt, was the most critical period since the Coast Guard cutter Itasca started the search just a week ago.

VAST AREA COVERED

In flights yesterday and Wednesday, the Colorado's airmen definitely eliminated the possibility she was in the area around Winslow Reef.

The sea and air search for the missing aviatrix and her navigator, Frederick J. Noonan, has encompassed an area of approximately 136,000 square miles, without even sighting some of the shoals and sandspits supposed to exist there.

The two flyers vanished a week ago today in an attempt to span the 2,750 miles from Lae, New Guinea, to Howland Island, a dot of land only two feet above sea level.

The planes from the Colorado, which steamed steadily from the equator southward toward the Phoenix Islands, soared over the area and south of Howland Island yesterday, but sighted no trace of the pair.

EVEN REEF NOT SIGHTED

The planes, piloted by Lieuts. J. O. Lambrecht, L. O. Fox and W. B. Short, Jr., could not even find Winslow Reef, which old charts show peeking just above the sea 175 miles southeast of Howland.

Mariners expressed belief the only available charts either misrepresented the location of the reef, which might have offered a precarious emergency landing spot, or else the little known outcropping had sunk below the sea's surface.

The Colorado's fliers, awaiting aid over the week-end from the aircraft carrier Lexington's 98 planes, today planned to swing southward once again, but come back on a course west of the Phoenix Islands and Howland.

This expedition would cover area previously unexplored by the cutter Itasca, which carried on the search alone for days near Howland Island before the Colorado arrived from Hawaii, more than 1500 miles away.

NEW SEARCH SOUTHWARD

Yesterday's flight of more than 500 miles after the planes were catapulated from the Colorado's deck covered hundreds of square miles not previously scanned.

Today the aviators planned to go as far south as Gardner Island and Carondelet Reef, the southernmost part of the Phoenix Islands, which center 280 miles south of lonely Howland.

The planes from the Colorado, which was proceeding cautiously to avoid uncharted reefs in the little traversed seas, were expected to complete search of the Phoenix group before arrival of the Lexington, being refueled at Lahaina Roads, near Honolulu.

The $40,000,000 aircraft carrier, which sped from San Diego to Hawaii, was expected to get away for the 1500-mile dash to the search area today, and send out her brood of planes probably Monday.

ITASCA STILL ACTIVE

Last reported in the vicinity of Baker island, 40 miles south of Howland, the Itasca planned to continue searching south as far as the Phoenix group, aided by the minesweeper Swan.

Should today's search prove fruitless, the navy fliers planned to spend Saturday combing the northeast portions of the Phoenix group, including Santon island, largest of the chain.

Rear Admiral O. G. Murfin, 14th naval district commandant and director of the search, expressed belief that success or failure of the hunt should be known by Monday, after the Lexington's planes, capable of covering 60,000 square miles daily, begin exploration.

Radio amateurs in Hawaii and on the mainland continued to report interception of messages they interpreted as being from the aviatrix, but Coast Guard and navy operators said they had not heard them, and in most instances pointed out the reported calls were on frequencies not used by the aviatrix.

Miss Earhart would be able to send only if her plane were on land.

David Binney Putnam, Miss Earhart's stepson, yesterday joined his father, George Palmer Putnam, in San Francisco, radiating confidence not shared in opinions privately expressed by air men and radio operators who have closely followed the search.

As the hunt widened, belief has steadily grown that Miss Earhart and Noonan never would be found.

Officials identified with the search and those close to the missing fliers, basing all their hopes and plans on the theory they are still alive, refused publicly to express their doubts.

CHANCE AGAINST THEM

While elaborate precautions were taken for the fliers' safety in the event of a forced landing at sea, all the laws of chance conspired against them.

Alighting on any of the few tiny islands of the Phoenix group where a landing was at all possible would be an exceptionally difficult feat for even a pilot of Miss Earhart's unquestioned skill. And finding one of these islands, when in their last report from the air they had not sighted land, would have been even more difficult.

Landing on a coral reef or a sandspit would have meant an inevitable crackup. It was possible the round-the-world fliers alighted near such a questionable haven, and safely reached it, but once there their position would still be precarious.

2 Boston Men 'Hear' Amelia

Two Greater Boston radio listeners said today they believed they had heard Amelia Earhart broadcasting from her plane.

Joseph W. Kenna, Farmer street, Arlington, declared he and two friends heard her on Kenna's short wave set, and that the voice said:

"This is KHAQQ. This is Amelia Earhart."

Nick Constantino, 297 Sumner street, East Boston, said he was listening on 31 kilocycles at 3:45 a. m. today when he heard a woman's voice and the call letters KHAQQ, then the words "Gilbert Islands" and "Alice" or "Ellice Islands."

The Gilbert Islands are west of Howland Island, while the Ellice Islands are southwest.

New Message Doubted By Hawaii Coast Guard

San Francisco, July 9 (INS)—Authenticity of a report by a Hilo, Hawaii, radio operator that he had picked up a new message from Amelia Earhart and Fred Noonan was discredited at the coast guard radio station at Fort Funston, which intercepted the message early today.

Here may be seen plane being catapaulted from the deck of the S. S. battleship Colorado, one of the fleet of naval craft engaged in the search for Amelia Earhart and her navigator, Fred Noonan. The three planes from the Colorado are now searching the Phoenix Islands group, south of Howland Island. On two flights over nearby areas the navy airmen reported finding no trace of the missing fliers or their plane—nor even reefs indicated on charts.

CODMAN 'OVERCHARGE' REVEALED BY GIRL

at prices ranging from $5.50 a cubic yard to $8.20.

She stated that in addition the Codman Hill concern bought a large amount of gravel and other materials and that, on all except the concrete, that company received a 2 per cent discount from list prices.

Lester F. Murphy, a Finance Commission investigator, then completed the story, testifying that the Codman Hill Construction Company charged the White Fund $1 more a yard for each type of concrete.

OTHER CHARGES

To this was added 10 per cent under the cost-plus contract. On gravel and other materials, according to Murphy, the Codman outfit charged the White Fund the full price, disregarding the 2 per cent discount. To this charged price 10 per cent was also added.

Major Hall was recalled as a witness and was asked by Farnum:

Q.—Can't you account for such incredible neglect and failure to protect the White Fund? A.—Not from that overcharge.

Q.—In view of what we're learned during this investigation, are you now satisfied that William J. Driscoll (president of the Codman Hill concern) was a reliable man whose word you could take? A.—The testimony of Miss Horrigan, the O'Connel Company witness, is amazing to me.

"Thank you for your frankness," said Attorney Farnum.

Major Hall had testified a few minutes before that he had questioned William J. Driscoll about high trucking charges and had been satisfied with Driscoll's explanation.

"This city is suffering from a conspiracy of indifference and silence on the part of Hall and his subordinates," declared Sullivan.

"No, sir, that's not true," declared Major Hall.

At the time of the verbal clash, Farnum had Major Hall under questioning, trying to show that the usual checkup was not made on the cost of materials used by the Codman Hill concern.

The witness admitted that nobody connected with the White Fund examined the books and records of the company to determine the actual cost of the materials.

Farnum contended that under the cost-plus system this is the regular practice of the city, but Major Hall, who besides being manager of the White Fund, is superintendent of public buildings, said it never had occurred to him to have such an audit made.

Major Hall said he signed the Codman Hill bills and marked them "correct" on the say-so of George Driscoll, secretary of the White Fund.

Eliot Wadsworth, one of the trustees of the White Fund, who made a statement under oath in the finance commission offices, May 27, was quoted by Farnum as saying he assumed Major Hall verified all the Codman charges.

"The city auditor, Mr. Fox, inferred from your signature on the bills that the contractor had been checked," continued Farnum. "Just what did you intend your signature to mean?"

"That, insofar as I knew, the bill was correct," replied Major Hall. "That is was an honest, accurate bill."

TOLD BY DRISCOLL

"Well, who told you the bills were correct?"

"George Driscoll."

The witness then admitted he never had asked Driscoll if the latter had checked the bills.

"Did you ever hear that second-hand piping was used by the Codman Hill Construction Co. on the $75,000 waterproofing job?" asked Atty. Farnum.

"I don't know of any second-hand piping being used," replied Major Hall. "If it was, it was probably for temporary purposes, pumping water out of the basements."

Farnum persisted:

"Didn't you ever hear that piping and other materials were bought by the Codman Hill Construction Co. from a wrecking concern for use on this waterproofing job?"

Major Hall made a vigorous denial.

WORKERS FIGHT WPA FIRINGS

Charges that supervisors of the WPA library project showed discrimination in the discharge of 136 workers last Wednesday were made today by 50 representatives of the group.

These charges were made before William H. O'Brien, personal director of District 3 of the Boston WPA, at the latter's headquarters, 14 Oliver street.

Protesting the alleged discrimination, Peter McCarran, a discharged worker, told O'Brien:

"The supervisors of the library project were not equipped to handle the practical aspects of the case. They're merely five and ten cent college graduates or graduates from farm schools out West.

"A college education doesn't mean anything and these supervisors were brought here without any practical experience."

Meanwhile, Lieutenant-Governor Francis E. Kelly today urged State WPA Director John J. McDonough to request federal relief officials to cancel the discharge of 20,000 workers in this state.

"We know that most of these persons and their families are now going on local and town welfare rolls," Kelly said in his letter.

The lieutenant-governor also stated that this state never received its proportional share of federal funds.

NEWTON GIRL BRINGS BACK 4 CRASH DEAD

Facing the sad task of burying her father, mother and two sisters, all drowned in an automobile tragedy in which she was rescued, Eleanor Wales, 27, of Auburn street, Auburndale, started home today from Calgary, Alta.

Before she arrives back in Newton for the ordeal of a joint funeral for all her nearest kin the Newton girl must first travel with her sorrow for four days.

Released this morning from a Calgary hospital, where she was treated for immersion and shock, Miss Wales essayed the 2500-mile journey by train alone.

Together the four victims of the tragedy and the only surviving member of the family are retracing the mileage they so happily covered by automobile earlier this month.

The funeral of her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Wales, and their daughters, Priscilla, 23, and Esther, 14 will according to tentative plans be held at the Auburndale Congregational Church next Thursday.

Relieving Eleanor of as much of her burden as possible her uncle, William Spooner of Cornell street, Newton Lower Falls, telephoned to the United States consul at Calgary and arranged for the shipment of the bodies. These will go to a Newton undertaker.

Eleanor, who is employed as a teacher at Peekskill, N. Y., escaped from the automobile by crawling through a window after the car crashed through a bridge rail and plunged into an irrigation canal, yesterday. When she floated to the surface, a witness of the accident pulled her out of the water.

Her father, a letter carrier working out of the Newton Center postoffice, was very well known in Newton, having lived there all his life.

MORGENTHAU EVADED TAX, SAYS FISH

stock which they exchanged back and forth to lessen tax payments.

President Roosevelt, at his press conference said he had no statement to make "at this time" concerning the charges concerning income tax returns of the President's family.

He indicated, however, that he would have something to say later.

Morgenthau, sitting among the spectators as Fish testified, informed the committee he would furnish it with his own returns, his wife's and those of his father, if the committee so desired.

MORGENTHAU IRRITATED

Fish was heard for 23 minutes without interruptions and then was bombarded with questions, Representative Vinson (D.) Kentucky, asserting repeatedly that all Fish's testimony was "hearsay" and unsupported by factual proof.

Fish asserted that Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt used "a legal tax loophole" by assigning her remuneration for broadcasts to charity.

He said that Henry Morgenthau, Sr., father of Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, had established family trusts and a personal holding company.

He asked investigation of the tax returns of James Roosevelt and Ann Boettiger, son and daughter of the President; John L. Lewis, labor chief; Harry L. Hopkins, Works Progress Administration director; and Ben Smith, New York financier, a heavy contributor to the Democratic campaign fund.

As Fish concluded, Morgenthau stepped to the witness stand:

"I invite the committee to examine the returns of myself, my wife and my father," he said.

Plainly irritated by the injection of his name into the inquiry, Morgenthau spoke in determined tone as he invited investigation.

WITHHOLDS FACT SOURCE

Fish, refusing to reveal the source of his information except in one instance, said he had been told that James Roosevelt had established a foreign corporation in the Bahama Islands.

He said he was told that Henry Morgenthau, Sr., had established a foreign corporation to reduce taxes.

Just before the committee adjourney until Tuesday Representative Treadway (R.) of Massachusetts asked whether the committee would accept Morgenthau's proffer of tax returns.

"I am sure there will be no objection by any member of the committee, but we should consider that in executive session," said Chairman Doughton (D.) of North Carolina.

KNIFE AIDS IN CONVICTION

Detective work by Sergeant George R. Finn of Chelsea police department resulted in the arrest and conviction in Chelsea district court today of William Japlan, 48, of Watts street.

Japlan was found guilty of larceny of $24, and a pocket knife from the home of Mrs. Mary McElchern of Washington avenue, Chelsea. He was placed on probation, ordered to make restitution.

Sergt. Finn said he stepped up to Japlan in a cafe, while dressed in civilian clothes, and took a pencil from his pocket.

"Got a knife, buddy?" he said he asked Japlan, "I want to sharpen a pencil."

"You're under arrest," said Finn as he looked at the knife and allegedly recognized it as the one stolen from Mrs. McElchern.

WAVE OF HEAT IS BELIEVED BROKEN

ington, Haverhill and Providence, while practically every hospital in Greater Boston had its full quota of heat prostration victims or patients suffering from heart attacks induced by heat.

In Medford, on Fellsway West, near Fulton street, James G. Johnston, 23, of Summer street, that city, nearly lost his life when he was overcome while at the wheel of an automobile.

The automobile shot off the road and crashed into a tree. Johnston was taken to Lawrence Memorial Hospital, where four stitches were taken in his right elbow. The automobile was wrecked.

While waiting for a trolley car at Lake street, Newton, Thomas Olivio, 81, of Whitfield street, Somerville, was also stricken. He was taken to the Newton Hospital.

Nor were humans alone the heat victims. Newton firemen were called to Farwell street, Newtonville, to the aid of a work horse who wilted near the home of its owner, Carmelo Gringeri. A hose effected the revival.

In Boston both the City Hall and State House worked with skeleton crews after noontime as they did yesterday. The State House will be closed tomorrow because of the five-day week. City Hall will be open, but with as few as possible on duty.

One thing that kept the weather from being intolerable was the comparatively low humidity. But at the same time this showed there was little prospect of cooling showers.

The humidity reading at 9 a. m. was 67 per cent, six below normal. An hour later it was only 58 per cent and it stayed close to that figure all day.

SEA BREEZES HELP

Maine forecasters felt that the sea breezes that were puffing in occasionally would lower temperatures in their state materially before the day was done.

Yesterday in Maine temperatures had ranged, unofficially, from 90 to 104 degrees. New Hampshire was comparatively well off with the mercury in the high eighties, but the thermometer was climbing.

Vermont records showed similar figures, but Rhode Island and Connecticut records were about the same as those in Massachusetts.

But if the New Englanders felt they were suffering, they weren't alone in their misery. The heat belt that had hitherto been confined to the region east of the Rocky Mountains was moving westward rapidly.

LAMAR HOT SPOT

In little Lamar, Colo., the mercury was boiling at the 102 mark. The same peak was reached at Atlantic, Ia., and in a score of other towns.

In the midwest, Chicago escaped the full blast of the heat—the mercury halting at 89 degrees—but the humidity was excessive and Bostonians know how that is.

On the Pacific Coast, San Francisco and Los Angeles were having very moderate temperatures in keeping with the boast of the "Native Sons."

Those dead in the last 24 hours as a result of the heat wave in New England are:

FRANCIS COSTA, 12, of Haskell street, Lexington, brother of Paul and Alice Costa, who were slain by Dr. Charles E. Mackey in South Boston last April. He died while swimming in the reservoir at Arlington Heights.

MRS. MARGARET SULLIVAN, 70, 176 Cedar street, Haverhill. Heart attack induced by heat.

THOMAS WILSON, 32, of Providence, R. I. Heart attack.

MRS. ALICE KATZ, 68, of Brockton, who died at the grave of her husband, Osher, on the fourth anniversary of his death. Heart attack.

MRS. RUTH HORTON CRARY, 62, 21 Foster street, Newtonville.

THOMAS LYNCH, 18, Central Falls, R. I.

THOMAS P. O'BRIEN, 58, 29 Houghton street, Worcester.

GEORGE W. BINGHAM, 10, West Springfield, drowned.

Youngsters, Trapped by Blaze, Saved

Two Charlestown youngsters, trapped by fire on the roof of a Chapman street house, in that district, early today, were rescued by a policeman as 14 other occupants of the building were fleeing to safety.

Racing up over the rear stairway, smoke-choked and with flames licking into the stairway well, Patrolman Joseph M. Mullen, who had turned in the alarm, rushed Lillian Champia and Lawrence Campbell from the roof to the street.

RETRUNS TO ROOF

The youngsters were on the roof seeking relief from the hot wave and endeavoring to sleep, when the fire started in the three-story house.

The Champia girl liked her airy house-top perch so well that she climbed back up there to catch up on her beauty sleep, after the blaze had been extinguished.

Frank Price, 33, of Marion street, East Boston, a passerby, discovered the fire and in punching through glass in the front door he suffered hand lacerations which necessitated treatment at Haymarket Relief Hospital.

Meanwhile, Patrolmen Mullen and John F. Sweeney had arrived and sighted the fire and smoke. Mullen raced for an alarm box a short distance away, then hastened back to the fire, where the two policemen and Prince aroused the occupants.

RESCUE BY OFFICER

On the second floor, Mrs. Mary Campbell and five of her children fled to the safety of Chapman street, and from the third floor, Mrs. Blanche Champia and seven of her eight children made their way to safety.

Then learning that the Champia girl and the Campbell boy were on the roof, Patrolman Mullen made his rescue.

Father Vents Fury on Attacker of Daughter, 9

Chicago, July 9 (INS)—As the cruelly wounded child whimpered in fear at the sight of her attacker, an outraged father today took the law into his own hands.

The father was keeping vigil beside the bed of the girl when John Ardelean, high school honor student and athlete, was brought into the room, manacled between two policemen.

Near death from 34 stab wounds and the brutal attack, nine-year-old Lorraine Hundreiser, cried in fear as she saw the youth:

"Please. That's him. Take him away. He hurt me."

Her father, Henry, gripped the bedpost until his knuckles turned white, then with a sudden lunge his fist thudded on the jaw of the husky youth. Ardelean's knees buckled. The police dragged him from the room as the father, still shaking with anger, shouted:

Lifeguard In 75th Rescue

Ben Donahue, 29-year-old L-street lifeguard, today effected his 75th life-saving. He rowed almost half a mile to the side of Anthony Malica, 16, of Emmet street, South Boston, attacked by a cramp, dived for him, and pulled him to safety.

Governor Hurley today awaited a reply from Senators David I. Walsh and Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., whom he telegraphed to "again contact" Colonel J. Monroe Johnson in Washington and impress upon him the advisability of making Boston an alternate airport for transatlantic air service.

Governor Hurley today revealed his liking for hot weather working hours rather than the State House air-cooling system. An hour before the close of the day's business he turns off the cooling system, installed by former Governor Curley. The Governor said "I prefer to work in the heat anyway."

Engineering construction awards totalled $66,998,000 during the past week, a 10 per cent increase over the corresponding week of 1936, the Engineering News Record revealed today. Private contracts were nine per cent below the 1936 week but public awards were 21 per cent higher.

Logan, 55, founder of the Nurses Training School in Cincinnati, O., and former dean of the Cook County Training School of Nurses in Chicago, will be appointed superintendent of nurses at Boston City Hospital, it was reported today. 2 Killed in Crash Just After Funeral

Franklin, N. H., July 9 (AP)—Leo Forcier, 59, of Chicopee Falls, Mass., and Norbert DeCelles, 70, of Woonsocket, R. I., were killed, and the latter's wife Mary, critically hurt today when their car and a truck collided while they were returning from a funeral.

City Marshal John Dodge said the Forcier car and a truck, owned and operated by Edward Crowley of Franklin, crashed on a curve on North Main street.

Crowley was unhurt. Nazaire Forcier, nephew of the dead man, also escaped injury.

Quins Reported Born in Cuba

Havana, July 9 (INS)—Efforts were under way today to confirm a dispatch to the newspaper El Pueblo from its Pinar Del Rio correspondent reporting birth of quintuplets at the village of Soroa to Senora Maria Vaga Cruz, wife of a poor Cuban farmer.

The dispatch said four boys and a girl were still alive seven hours after the reported multiple birth.

Parade of States Ends Convention

Bretton Woods, N. H., July 9—With a parade of states, illustrating different kinds of work adapted to their various communities by the Catholic Daughters of America, the organization today concluded its 17th annual biennial national convention.

Earlier today Miss Mary C. Duffy of South Orange, N. J., was unanimously re-elected supreme regent for a two-year term. Miss Duffy led the march of the states.

Other officers elected were Miss Frances Maher, Kane, Pa., vice supreme regent; Miss Katherine M. Rosney, New York, national secretary; Mrs. Mary F. Larkin, New York, national editor; Mrs. Anne M. Baxter, Dubuque, Ia., national treasurer, and Mrs. Lenora Z. Meder, Chicago, national counsellor.

Directors include Miss Mary E. Keough, Rutland, Vt.; Veronica M. O'Connor, Omaha, Neb.; Mrs. Margaret Broussard, New Orleans; Mrs. Lulu Spilde, Mitchell, S. D.; Mrs. Anna K. Ball, East Milton, Mass., and Mrs. Margaret A. Tynan, Poughkeepsie, New York.

Earlier, the Rev. Francis P. LeBuffe, S. J., of New York, business manager of the Catholic weekly, America, asserted the practice of social justice was the most effective means of combating Communism, and urged his hearers to be "interested in Communism in an intelligent way."

Describing Communism as a philosophy of life, he asserted:

"You can't fight ideas with a rubber hose, club or firing squad. You could line every Communist in the world against a wall and shoot them dead as doornails—and Communism would still live.

"You cannot shoot ideas. You must fight ideas with ideas.

School Head Hits 'Standardized' Teaching

North Adams, July 9 (AP)—Dr. Harry A. Brown, superintendent of schools in Needham, today asserted teacher education throughout the country has fallen into a uniform pattern which is "unfavorable to progress."

Speaking at a conference on rural education held by the Massachusetts department of education, Dr. Brown said in a prepared address:

"The curricula of normal schools and teachers' colleges are so nearly alike throughout the country as to represent stagnation.

"The duty of the teachers' colleges is now clear. They must furnish, over a period of years, a staff of teachers for the public schools who understand the social, economic and political problems with which this country is faced, and who will take a foremost position in producting that intelligence in the population which alone will be sufficient to solve society's problems as they arise in both the present and the future."

STAR RESUMES PUBLICATION IN SEATTLE

Seattle, July 9 (AP)—The Seattle Star management announced today its newsroom and mechanical departments were operating on schedule to publish editions, while American Newspaper Guild representatives continued an all-night session pondering a management settlement proposal.

The Star began getting out its first edition with a news staff comprising E. W. and James Scripps, youthful heads of the Scripps League of Newspapers, and three subordinate executives, not members of the Guild.

The Star management made its counter-proposal after rejecting the strikers' peace offering last night. The Star plan would provide:

The Star to continue on its payroll 19 circulation employes involved in the dispute until the question of whether the Guild or the Teamsters' Union has jurisdiction over them is settled by the National Labor Relations Board, the courts or by mutual consent.

PICKETS MOVED BACK

That all persons employed on July 2 are invited to return "without discrimination."

That the Guild call off the strike.

Police moved back the Guild's picket line yesterday, and a night shift of printers went on duty.

The Guild then presented a peace proposal which provided for retention of the circulation men, pending a jurisdictional decision. The Guild had previously rejected this suggestion.

OTHER DEMANDS

The Guild plan also called for reinstatement of Rodney L. Brink, Scripps editor, who resigned Wednesday, and provided that the Star immediately negotiate a Guild shop agreement for non-mechanical departments.

The Star's counter offer ignored these provisions.

At Bellingham, Wash., settlement of the strike which closed the Bellingham Evening News June 3 was announced.

The settlement was "mutually agreeable to all parties concerned," said George Hipkoe, Guild president. Publisher S. N. Harrison declined to say when publication would be resumed.

U.S. Employe Union Pact Ban Seen by Roosevelt

Washington, July 9—With John L. Lewis' CIO undertaking organization of government workers here, President Roosevelt today asserted that the government could not make contracts with any federal worker.

The President further declared federal employes do not have the right to strike under civil service laws.

The President made clear at his press conference, however, that any employe could join any union he wanted to, or as many as he wanted to. Majorities, minorities and even individual employes should have the right of hearing before administrative officers of their department, he added.

On the question of pay, however, Congress established the formula and any change must come by legislation, the President said. He also said his attempt to balance the budget by June 30, by saving 10 per cent. of total appropriations on flexible items would involve no discharge or furloughing of government employes.

He made this plain to relieve the minds of the large number of federal workers. He added he expected the largest saving would be accomplished through not filling vacancies.

NEW STRIKE CALL AT REPUBLIC FAILS

NOT A SINGLE WORKER LEAVES

Youngstown, O., July 9 (AP)—A call for a new strike at Republic Steel plants here by the Steel Workers' Organizing Committee failed today as the deadline of 12:30 p. m. (E. D. T.) passed with no workers leaving the mills.

Republic officials said "not a single man left the plant."

Republic officials said a few automobiles went in and out the gate but these were "ordinary traffic."

Police squads, held in reserve, were dismissed at noon.

George Simcox, vice-president of the steel workers' organizing committee at the Republic plant, had announced the strike call at a meeting last night.

Simcox' statement followed by a few hours the assertion made in Washington by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, that "the steel strikes are lost."

Green has been at odds with John L. Lewis, ex officio leader of the steel strikes as chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization, parent body of the S. W. O. C.

Green based his assertion on his claims that the S. W. O. C. had enrolled only a minority when it called the strikes and that it lacked public support because of "the violent policies pursued by the CIO."

Simcox said the strike call was issued only to Republic employes here, and that similar action in the plants of Youngstown Sheet & Tube Company would be taken later.

"Everything will be lawful," Simcox said. "There will be no rough stuff. We have key men in the plants ready to call all men out at the appointed hour."

He asked all strikers to gather at the Poland avenue gate of the Republic mill and "show Tom Girdler that the real Republic workers are not in the plant."

But nothing ever happened.

Republic reported yesterday that 6,200 men out of a normal force of 6,800 here were on duty. Sheet & Tube claimed it had 12,500 men at work in two Youngstown plants which have an average daily total of 13,050 at work.

The deadlock keeping 7000 Sheet & Tube employes idle in Indiana's Calumet district continued as Governor M. Clifford Townsend urged petitioners for reopening of the two mills to "help convince the Youngstown Company to pursue a fair policy."

WOOLEN STRIKE ENDED HERE

After more than three weeks of wrangling, during which 100,000 bales of wool piled up on piers, the Boston wool handlers' strike was ended today, shortly before noon, union men dropping their demand for a closed shop.

The agreement was reached at a meeting at the National Wool Marketing Corporation, 281 Summer street attended by wool dealers and representatives of the wool handlers, general warehouse workers, truck drivers and helpers.

Just before the meeting, Patrick O'Grady, business agent for Wool Handlers' Local, 1454, said that 500 strikers had met last night and voted to accept a proposal containing no provision for a closed or preferential shop.

Every Friday, when the home teams are playing here, ladies are admitted FREE (except for government tax of 10 cents) at National League Field and Fenway Park. Will you be there? You can be if you'll let electrical servants give you the extra time you need. The electric cleaner for instance, ends tiring hours of cleaning by hand. The electric washer does a big washing in less than two hours.

As for dinner — simply put it in an electric oven and set the controls. It will be waiting for you when you get home.

Electricity works tirelessly, dependably for only a few pennies. Your neighborhood Edison Shop or electrical dealer will be glad to show you how economically electrical servants can work for you. Don't miss another Ladies' Day!

CHEERS FROM HARVARD

From a Harvard student with an address in Wigglesworth Hall, another letter said:

"How the male Harvardians here this summer would be electrified if you paid this sacred shore a visit. The vision of an embattled blondina with the radiance and lust for life you seem to own, crossing swords with a school board, is an amusing sight. Why, it's rank low comedy.

"I could not let this dull day slip by without whooping it up for your cause and letting out a loud Texas yippee to commemorate my discovery of your beaming face in the Boston and New York newspapers and tell you how wonderful you are.

"I am glad the teaching profession has at least one member who has imagination."

A CROONER WRITES

From a Caldwell, N. J., writer:

"I would like to introduce myself. I am 24 years old, have brown hair, blue eyes and am about five feet ten inches tall. I am a printer by day and a crooner by night. I hope you don't think I am being fresh in writing this, as I would like very much for you to answer if you can.

"My purpose in writing to you is to let you know I am pulling for you to put it over on those old fossils who have you on the spot."

An Ossining, N. Y., man wrote:

"I can't understand how a very pretty girl like you hasn't received a proposal. By the looks of your photographs, I could go for you in a big way.

"I am a young man of 26 and am studying to be a concert singer. Some day you will see my profile on the screen.

"I understand that you teach dramatics. I sure would like to take lessons from you. I intend to go to Massachusetts pretty soon and would like to drop in on you. Would you accept my welcome? Let me hear from you as I am very interested in your case—also you."

Enclosing a clipping on her case from a Philadelphia paper, a Rathway, N. J., mn penned:

"Now please don't let those old fossils put anything over on you. Employ the best legal talent available to defend your case, and then watch those old fossil birds fold their arms over their faces and walk away.

"Please let me know what the outcome is."

JEALOUSY CITED

From a lad with a New York Y. M. C. A. address:

"I know what Massachusetts school teachers do for pastime, for I have waited on plenty of them—one a little Boston school teacher who is very sweet. But I know from her that most elder teachers are jealous of the younger ones."

From Cleveland, Ohio:

"Keep a stiff upper lip and fight those fossils to the last ditch. The young and progressive members of the coming generation are with you. If you lose out with them—so what? You will, I am sure, get something more lucrative.

"So fight on, Modern Girl. Only a couple of million at your back. But a million is a million."

From another Ohio city—Norwood—a high school boy wrote:

"As I am only a high school student myself, I certainly hope you carry on your fight. In the first place, don't let old fogies interfere with your fight to carry on.

"I do wish that you would continue teaching, if you are reinstated, and forget your Hollywood chances for the time and prove to old fogies that you are not guilty of any scandal concerning you."

Miss Hallin's fight took a legal turn when her counsel, Daniel Canning, announced he will seek a writ of mandamus in supreme court if she is not appointed for a third term.

Canning also announced that more than 2000 Saugus residents have signed petitions asking that Miss Hallin be reappointed and that the general sentiment of the townspeople is all in favor of his client.

The young, attractive teacher has been asked to resign by the school committee "for the good of the department" on a motion introduced by Miss Marie E. Smith, 70-year-old spinster member.

Miss Smith withdrew charges that Miss Hallin had entertained members of this school dramatic club in her home with a cocktail party but still expressed herself in favor of the resignation demand. Two of the committee's five members are against the ouster attempt.

Approximately 30 Saugus high school students paraded in front of Miss Smith's home last night, holding signs demanding "fair play," a "public hearing" and the "clearing" of Miss Hallin's name.

Meanwhile, Chairman George A. McCarrier of the school committee ordered a meeting next Tuesday night to determine whether the board should grant a hearing.

Stories that his daughter, Isabelle Hallin (above), blonde, Saugus instructor, "wore clothes too good for a high school teacher" were branded as "lies" by her father, C. Fred Hallin. "Isabelle has made her own clothes since she was 12," he asserted. She is shown here in garden.

The Brighter Side

By DAMON RUNYON

(Copyright, 1937, by King Features Syndicate, Incorporated. International copyright and all other rights reserved. Distributed by Universal Service.)

Damon Runyon

Will Rogers was a great showman, and understood the value of keeping his name and personality before the public. He had something to sell, and publicity was his greatest asset in selling it. Thus he could not be a shrinking violet under any ordinary public circumstances.

By nature, however, he was a man of simple taste and manner, and even as a salesman of his own tremendous talent, he avoided ostentation. He dressed carelessly, liked to eat at a counter, and loved the association of just folks.

It is our guess that the old boy would be considerably startled if he could see the monument they have reared to his memory out in Colorado.

It is no more than his memory deserves, but plain-as-an-old-shoe Bill would probably have allowed that it was sort o' piling it on. But he could have helped being highly flattered.

Not many men in the history of this country, of private or public works, have had their memory preserved in the enduring manner that will keep the name of the one time cowboy, actor, and writer in the minds of the generations to come.

LASTING MEMORIAL

On a high hill in the Rocky Mountain range of the centennial state, an old friend and admirer of Rogers has built a stone tower to Bill's memory that will be standing there long after all the folks now living are dead, and crumbled to dust, and long forgotten.

We have just received a letter from Mr. Ralph C. Taylor, City Editor of the Pueblo Chieftain, our Colorado newspaper alma mater, telling us a lot of interesting things about the monument.

It is now practically completed and open to the public, but it will not be formally dedicated until September 6 when the dedication will be made the occasion of a three days celebration with a great rodeo as the highlight.

They call the monument the Will Rogers Shrine of the Sun. It is a 100-foot tower of granite that looks like an architectural bit out of the old world, and it stands on the edge of Cheyenne Mountain, half a mile above the plain below, where the famous Broadmoore Hotel is located.

PENROSE TRIBUTE

It has taken 30 men about two years to build the tower, and Mr. Taylor avers that there is not a stick of wood or a nail in the structure. It is all granite, concrete and steel.

The shrine is the idea of Mr. Spencer Penrose, of Colorado Springs. We know Mr. Penrose. Folks used to call him "Speck." He is a brother of old Bois Penrose, who, in his lifetime, bossed the State of Pennsylvania like it never has been bossed.

Spencer Penrose, a graduate of Harvard, went out to Colorado years back and settled in Colorado Springs. He is a rich man and he has spent a barrel of money in enterprises of merit in that region.

He financed the Will Rogers shrine himself. He called in an architect named Charles E. Thomas, and a construction superintendent named Milton J. Strong and told them to build a beautiful tower on that eyebrow of Cheyenne Mountain and never mind the expense.

BUILT BEAUTIFULLY

From Mr. Taylor's fluent description, we gather that is one thing they did not mind—expense. They built against the ages, but beautifully. The tower is of light pink granite.

Some of the floors in the rooms inside are of imported Italian red marble. Others are of terazzo. All the doors are of heavy ornamental iron. The windows are metal frames with cathedral glass. We gather that it is a gorgeous structure.

The tower is anchored 28 feet into the solid rock, and protected against the lightning that sometimes buzzes over Cheyenne Mountain. Inside the shrine is a pictorial history of the Pike's Peak region in colored frescoes, the work of Randall Davey of Santa Fe, N. M.

In one of the memorial rooms is to be placed a bust of Will Rogers by Jo Davidson, the famous sculptor.

At sun-up, Mr. Taylor says, the tower catches the first rays of sunshine. At night, the last glow of the setting sun glints on the great shaft. That is why they call it the shrine of the sun. Will Rogers would have liked that name.

CHINA TROOPS QUIT WAR AREA

Peiping, China, July 9 (AP)—Official Chinese-Japanese spokesmen announced today that Chinese troops had completed evacuation of the trouble zone of Wanpinghsien, scene of a clash between Japanese and Chinese armies.

The spokesmen said the Wanpinghsien incident had been "successfully localized" by the withdrawal and replacement of the troops by police.

Both the Japanese and the Chinese suspected the other would fail to fulfill the terms of the mutual evacuation agreement, reached at 4 o'clock this morning.

Fighting broke out this morning and again early this afternoon in the western suburban area of this old Dragon capital.

Eva von Blomberg Wills Sister Funds

The will of Eva von Blomberg, 8?, who died at the home of friends on Beacon Hill two weeks ago, was filed in Suffolk Probate Court today.

By the instrument she establishes a trust fund for the payment of $100 monthly to her sister, Adelheid M. von Blomberg, who caused a stir a few years ago by adopting William Frary, Lynn press agent.

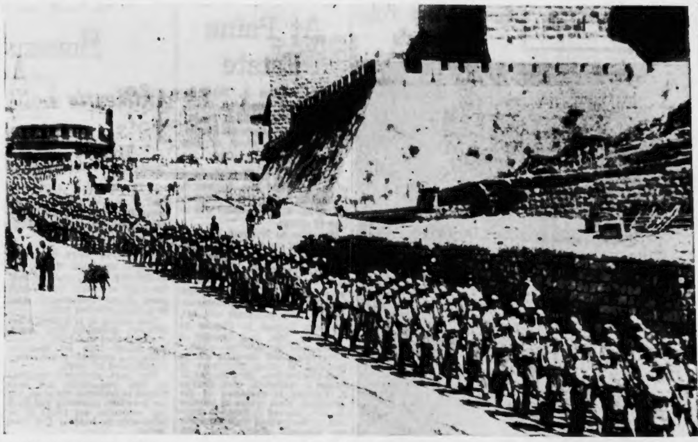
READY TO ENFORCE HOLY LAND PARTITION



In historic Jerusalem, where Roman legionnaires marched 2000 years ago to enforce the Pax Romana, these modern British troops swing along in martial array today to put England's might behind a new "Peace Britannica," a feature of which is a division of Palestine between Jews and Arabs, with a neutral strip, under British administration, between. Jews and Arabs, alike, bitterly protest the "compromise," the war-like Arabs threatening armed resistance. They'll have to reckon, however, with Lieutenant-General John G. Dill's well-trained soldiery, which is demonstrating here.

MADRID TROOPS BATTLE REBELS

By the Associated Press

Spanish government troops struck heavily at insurgent forces on the southern and western fringes of Madrid today, while government planes paved the way with terrific bombardments.

Tanks led attacks in the southern push at Getafe and Carabanchel. One government army speared deeply into insurgent territory at Quijorna, 18 miles west of Madrid, and at Villafranca Del Castillo, seven miles northeast of Quijorna.

The defense ministry said bombs destroyed a number of insurgent planes in an attack on an airport near Segovia. Troop concentrations, artillery batteries and insurgent trains and trucks were bombed.

Insurgents said a battle of "terrific intensity" was under way at Quijorna, but declared a government offensive was repulsed with heavy government losses.

The non-intervention committee adjourned after a three-hour session in London, still deadlocked on new plans for keeping arms and men from reaching Spain.

Great Britain, rebuffed by Germany and Italy on her proposal that she and France take over the naval patrol of Spain's coasts, looked to Germany and Italy to take the initiative in new proposals.

Cardinal O'Connell Names Transfers

Transfer of two pastors and the promotion of another churchman to a pastorate was announced today by Cardinal O'Connell.

Rev. Ambrose A. Dore of St. Paul's Church, Wellesley, is transferred to St. Raphael's Church, West Medford, to take the place of the late Rev. John J. Powers. Rev. Joseph J. Smith of St. Michael's Church, Bedford, is transferred to St. Paul's Church, Wellesley, to take Fr. Dore's post. Rev. James J. Walsh, administrator of St. Michael's Church, will take Fr. Smith's place.

Obtains License As Truck Burns

Joseph Gaudreau of Biddeford, Me., didn't mind paying the $11 Massachusetts license fee—but that $150 fire damage bill—well, that's adding insult to injury.

Gaudreau was stopped on the Worcester turnpike in his truck by a motor vehicles inspector and told he would have to procure interstate carrier plates.

While he was applying for the plates at the registry he glanced down to the street and saw his truck on fire. The blaze was extinguished with $150 damage.

SENDS JAPAN ULTIMATUM

Moscow, July 9 (US)—The smouldering Soviet-Japanese crisis flared to new and dangerous heights today when Russia formally warned Japan its armed forces have been ordered to take drastic action against any further Japanese "invasions" of Russia's far eastern territories.

The warning, accompanied by a bristling protest against alleged Japanese military incursions that resulted in a bloody frontier battle last Monday, was delivered by Soviet Foreign Commissar Maxim Litvinoff to Japanese Ambassador Mamoru Shigemitsu.

The protest, following by three days the engagement that reportedly cost 20 Russian and one Japanese lives on the border between Siberia and Japanese-dominated Manchukuo, accused Japan of "repeated incursions into Soviet territory."

Fall Out Window Proves Fatal

David Coleman, 30, living at the Hotel Regent, Tremont street, Boston, died this morning in City Hospital, following a fall from his third floor room to the street early today.

Police believe he fell through the open window of the room as he dozed in a chair beside it. A rocking chair facing the window and touching the sill, which is but three feet from the floor, indicates this probability.

Coleman was picked up by Clayton Ackles, night clerk at the hotel, who heard the thud of the fall. Coleman sustained a fractured skull, internal injuries and lacerations.

ASK ARAB KINGS AID IN PALESTINE FIGHT

Jerusalem, July 9 (AP)—The Arab higher committee cabled to four Arab kings today a plea "in the name of God and religion" to intervene against the British plan to partition Palestine.

The rulers from whom assistance was sought in the tense situation are Ibn Saud Emir of the Arabian Saudian Kingdom, the Imam of Yemen, Emir Abdullah of Transjordan, and the Ghazi of Iraq.

The committee, in its hurried message, protested that the best part of Palestine would go to the Jews and the holy places would go under British mandate.

On the other hand, the Jews were no better pleased. Many of them looked upon the proposed partition as "the end of a great dream and a great experiment," the idea of Lord Balfour to establish a Jewish national home in all the Holy Land.

WARNS BRITAIN

Confronted already by reports of minor disturbances following disclosure of the plan, Great Britain was warned she would find it impossible to carry out the scheme without use of force.

Anibey Abdulhadi, member of the Arab higher committee, declared of the proposal to divide the Holy Land into sovereign Arab and Jewish states:

"I cannot imagine an Arab hand could sign anything like that."

POLICE ALERT

Besides the two states, the British royal commission proposed creation of a new mandate under which Britain would control the holy cities of Jerusalem, Bethlehem and Nazareth. Despite the outbursts, the London government stood by its plan and prepared to ask the League of Nations soon for its approval.

Palestine "Betrayed," Rabbi Wise Charges

New York, July 9 (US)—Dr. Stephen S. Wise, president of the Zionist organization of America today had accused Great Britain of a "great betrayal" in the partition of Palestine between Arabs and Jews.

"The decision strikes at the very heart of Jewish hopes and is an affront to the League of Nations," read a statement issued by him. "This is a great betrayal of a sacred trust."

Reich Voices Plea For German Minorities

Berlin, July 9 (AP)—The Third Reich voiced an unmistakable plea for German minorities in Europe today in comment on the British plan to partition the Holy Land. The Diplomatisch Politische Korrespondenz, mouthpiece of the foreign office, observed that there are sections in Europe where minorities' rights should be established first, however laudable may be Britain's efforts to solve the problems of Jews and Arabs in Palestine.

Pin Removed From Throat of Baby

Rushed 175 miles from Pittsfield to Boston, with police leading the way, 6-months-old Marylin McClusky was saved today at Deaconess Hospital by surgeons who removed an open safety pin from her oesophagus.

The child suffered no ill effects from the operation, it was announced at the hospital.

Finding that Pittsfield hospitals were not equipped to perform the bronchoscope operation, the child's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank McClusky, arranged for the police motorcycle escort at midnight and the high-speed trip to Boston was begun at 12:30 a. m.

Faith Donaldson to Become Bride in September

By BETTY ALDEN

THE QUESTION of whether to have a career or a husband has not arisen in Faith Donaldson's life . . . because she is going to have both . . .

Even if Faith does not continue her many activities after her marriage to Russell Grace D'Oench in September and settles down to become one of New York's most attractive younger matrons, she still has had enough of a career to equal the average girl's life time . . .

MRS. HEYWOOD FOX

Perhaps one of the high spots of her activities was the experience she had last winter doubling for Claudette Colbert in the most daring skiing scenes in "A Girl From Paris" . . . Her skiing ability won her a place on the American women's team in the international matches . . . and without a doubt she would have gained a berth on the Women's Olympic team if she had not foregone this honor to be secretary and interpreter to an economic expedition to Russia in the winter of 1936 . . .

Unlike many girls who spend most of their waking hours dreaming of getting into the movies, and later go to Hollywood for long months of apprenticeship, Faith broke into the flickers quite unexpectedly . . . while enjoying winter sports at Sun Valley, Idaho, last winter . . . The skiing sequences of the picture were taken there and Faith's ability, plus her general appearance which is not unlike Claudette Colbert, attracted the producers who were searching for a society girl to perform some slaloms and turns which were beyond Miss Colbert's ability . . .

Besides all these activities Faith has made her debut in both Scotland and Boston, and is a member of the Junior League and Vincent Club . . .

Her fiance is a prominent business executive of New York and it would be difficult to mention a well known Gotham club to which he does not belong . . .

The wedding will take place in September, following Faith's return from Europe and the return of the rest of her family from Colorado where they are roughing it on the ranch belonging to Dr. Lunt's sister, Mrs. C. Phelps Dodge of Washington, D. C. . . .

Notes From Gay Summer Resorts

SIZZLING ENTRIES IN THE LOGBOOK OF A SIMMERING SUMMER SEASON AT THE SEA SHORE: The ocean breezes on Cape Cod sweep across the dunes to sing songs for the poets' ears and draw designs to thrill the artists, but summer visitors are completely satisfied with their utilitarian achievement of cooling the atmosphere . . . Mrs. Harry Hayward and her daughter Harriet (Mrs. George Sanders) are enjoying the cool Cape breezes as they read the newspaper accounts of the sweltering temperatures here in town . . . Mrs. Sanders is still convalescing from her motor accident of last summer . . . She spent most of the winter in a Boston hospital . . .

Despite all the attention attracted by the imposing new canal bridges, there is still plenty of interest in the contract variety . . . Mrs. Frances V. Aldrich of Beacon Hill is managing the weekly contract parties at the Wianno Club . . . She is the mother of Mrs. Oliver Wadsworth . . . The parties are held every Tuesday afternoon and among the players are Mrs. J. Mott Hallowell, Mrs. Francis W. Bird, Mrs. Charles Russell, and Mrs. Channing Wells . . . Mrs. Wells' daughter, Mrs. Heywood Fox, is down from Southbridge, visiting her parents at Wianno . . . A little stranger is expected in the Hevwood household in the very near future . . .

Mrs. Lewis Bell is sporting a very tricky sailing outfit . . . A coverall of blue denim . . . it has a hood like Little Red Riding Hood's which keeps even the most meticulously set wave and ringlets in place . . . BELMONTS Are Ardent Polo Enthusiasts

MR. AND MRS. AUGUST BELMONT, Jr., of Gladstone, N. J., actually were photographed at a polo match on Long Island, but they are so well known on the North Shore that the picture could easily have been taken at the Myopia Hunt Club. Mrs. Belmont is the former Betsy Saltonstall, daughter of John Saltonstall of "Huntwick," Topsfield, and she is a cousin of practically each and every member of the younger generation of Saltonstalls around Boston. The couple was married in Christ Church, Hamilton, about six years ago.

NEW SCALP RITUAL IS SUMMER-TIME DELIGHT

Antiseptic Lotion Works Wonders

By ARLINE GOULD

THERE'S nothing like the bugaboo of tell-tale powdery shoulder flecks to mar an even temper.

Dandruff is a common offender and even the best groomed pair of shoulders in the world sometimes reveal embarrassing deposits. What actually causes it is still something of a mystery, but dandruff really can be routed . . . and all quite easily, too.

We believe we've discovered the most amazingly simple way of fighting it . . . and certainly the most effective. No, it isn't some sacred necromantic salve or a rare, priceless lotion.

The fact is it is a simple but efficient antiseptic that you've probably used hundreds of times for minor cuts, for mosquito bites . . . even for a refreshing mouth wash or gargle.

The safe antiseptic qualities of this preparation not only helped to eradicate the germ, but its beneficial cleansing and healing properties are found to be invaluable in treating this complaint.

While science may still be somewhat in the dark about the origin of this unpleasant condition (disease is really a better word), it has been pretty definitely proven that a germ with the frightening appellation of "pityrosporum ovale" is somewhere mixed up in it.

Give yourself a treatment at home once or twice a day. And use it full strength on your scalp. Don't be afraid it will harm your hair for we know a pediatrician who recommended it for a slight scalp irritation on a six-weeks' old infant.

The best method is to pour a quantity of it on a pad of cotton and apply it thoroughly over the entire scalp. Once the solution has been spread, massage the scalp with the finger tips using a rotary motion.

Be sure the massage is vigorous and persistent as this helps to loosen the scales, and permits the lotion to penetrate down to the roots of the hair. And be sure to allow it to dry on the hair for the best results.

In no way will it affect the coloring of the hair or the scalp tissues. If your hair is particularly dry, rub in a bit of oil before shampooing. It comes in all size bottles (some as low as twenty-five cents) and is as fine a dandruff-fighting germicide as we've ever seen.

To learn the name of this antiseptic call Arline Gould, Liberty 4000, week-days until 5, or write to her at the Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Beauty Answers

Question—Will you please send me a copy of the "Eat your way to beauty diet." I believe this is the diet of Dr. Bircher-Benner of Zurich. Is it solely a complexion diet or is it a reducing diet as well? Mrs. E. S., Salem.

Answer:—To obtain this diet which contains a complete menu of "complexion dishes" which an international beauty authority has adapted to American needs, please write this department again and enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Yes, it is a reducing as well as a beautifying affair and is based on the sunlight-nutrition theory of diet. I think you will enjoy trying it as it has met with tremendous success in New York.

KATIE'S FIERY TEMPERAMENT PRESENTS CURIOUS PROBLEM

CHAPTER 349

KATIE looked up at me in ludicrous incredulity as I told her mendaciously that her swoon had not affected the condition of my mother-in-law, adding truthfully that the older woman was worried about her.

"Vot dat?" she demanded sharply. "You say old vomans vorry ofer me? Me? No, no," she shook her head with finality.

"Not in vun, two, tree tousand years vill she bodder her head aboudt me. Me, I know dot old vomans. She goot, she even kindt sometimes, but she no like me.

"I no blame her," she went on, regardless of the nurse's attempts to quiet her. "Me, I act like vun devil mit her, but den she devil me first till I no can tell eef my head ees on mine neck or mine heels."

"Katie, dear, listen to me," I said. "You must obey the nurse so you do not become really ill."

"All right, I mind her," she said laconically, and the nurse stepped forward.

KATIE IMPROVES

"Come up with me now, Katie," she said, "and let me put you to bed. What you need now is a nice, long sleep. Then you'll be all right."

Jim, hovering anxiously in the background, for when anything is wrong with his tempestuous wife, his world patently stops, ventured a suggestion.

"Why couldn't I finish up dinner, Katie?"

"Ho! ho! dot's a goot vun!" Katie's laugh accompanying her derisive words was so indulgently and affectionately good-natured that though Jim flushed he palpably was neither seriously abashed nor offended.

WHO'LL SERVE DINNER?

"I like to see Jeem mit dot dinner vunce," she said, and I made the mental comment that Katie was recovering with remarkable rapidity from her swoon.

"He put sugar in dot soup und salt in pie," she went on. "No, pie she all made but he salt eet anyway."

She glanced coquettishly at her husband, and then looked at the nurse pleadingly.

"I feel all right, honest," she said. "Please let me go by my keetchen."

"I can't do that, Katie." The nurse's tone was rigidly professional. "You must go to bed for a while, or I can't be responsible for you. You must have rest and sleep. And don't worry about dinner. I'll take care of it. I know quite a good deal about cooking."

"I sure you know about cooking," she said. "But," she added sullenly, "I no like odor vomans in mine keetchen."

"But," I said quickly, "you surely don't mind me, Katie; I know just how you do things."

EVERYTHING'S SETTLED

"You ought to," Katie retorted, looking up at me with affectionate eyes.

"I am tired sitting down," I laughed. "It will do me good to stir around. Now you lie back and rest easy about the dinner."

"Come on, Katie," the nurse interposed. "Your husband and I will help you to bed."

"Oh! I don't vant go opp dere all by mineself," Katie wailed like the child she is. "Jeem he haf to do chores, und I be so lonesome."

"Why can't she stay right here and sleep?" I asked the nurse.

She glanced at me and then said quickly: "She can. Here, Katie, lie back and let me cover you better. Go to sleep as quickly as you can."

She covered the girl deftly, raised a window near the couch and left the room with me. Outside the closed door, safely out of Katie's possible hearing, she looked at me curiously.

"You're different from most other employers of servants I've seen," she said.

Supper at Eight

Cool Dishes For Hot Summer Nights

FROM MARTHA LEE'S FRIDAY MORNING BROADCAST OVER STATION WMEX

DINNER is rather an overpowering word, particularly during summer weather. An invitation to dinner implies a lavish meal. Why not ask your friends to come for supper with the family?

Supper suggests something homey and cozy—a simple meal—but very delicious—enjoyed in a friendly, informal atmosphere. Does it sound more enticing to you than dinner?

And for the hostess who must serve her meals in a tiny dinette, supper sounds much more appropriate then dinner. Here is a summer menu made to order for just such an occasion:

DEVILED CRAB MEAT
Garden Salad Cornmeal Muffins
Strawberry Shortcake Coffee

This scalloped crabmeat dish has lots of pep and personality—and the crisp golden hot muffins are perfect with it. Be sure to give your guests liberal servings of butter for the muffins.

The tossed green salad—made from any green things you can find in your market—is cool and refreshing and just what you need to complete this first course.

DEVILED CRAB MEAT

1½ cups milk
2 cups crab meat (a 13-oz. can)
5 hard cooked eggs
1-3 teaspoon dry mustard
⅛ teaspoon cayenne pepper
1½ teaspoons salt
⅓ cup melted butter
Bread crumbs or cracker crumbs for top

Moisten the bread crumbs with milk. Remove the bones from the crab meat and mix it with the bread crumbs, milk and finely sliced egg whites. Then blend in the mashed egg yolks, mustard, cayenne, salt and butter. Pour into a shallow buttered baking dish and sprinkle the crumbs over the top. Dot with butter. Then bake for 15 minutes in a moderately hot oven, 450 deg. F. This recipe will give six generous servings.

CORN MEAL MUFFINS

1 cup all-purpose flour
1 cup white or yellow cornmeal
¼ cup sugar
1 teaspoon baking powder
2 tablespoons shortening
½ teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon salt
1 egg
1 cup sour milk

Sift the flour once before measuring. Sift the flour, cornmeal, sugar and baking powder, soda and salt together. Beat the egg and add to the milk. Combine with the flour mixture. Add the melted shortening and beat well. Fill greased muffin or gem pans two-thirds full and bake for 25 minutes in a moderately hot oven, 400 deg. F.

Sweet milk may be substituted for the sour milk in the recipe. In that case omit the soda and increase the baking powder to four teaspoons. Also increase the shortening to four tablespoons.

TOSSED SALAD FOR SALAD BOWL OR INDIVIDUAL PLATES

Crisp lettuce leaves
½ medium-sized cucumber (sliced thin)
6 radishes (sliced thin)
1 tablespoon chives (cut fine)
3 ripe tomatoes cut in wedges
French dressing

Prepare, chill and dry the vegetables. Pluck apart crisp, cold, well-dried leaves of lettuce. Place in salad bowl (previously rubbed with a clove of garlic if desired). Add crisp cucumber and radish sliced and the chives. Toss gently with a fork and spoon in a bowl with just enough French dressing to make the leaves of lettuce glisten. Add tomato just before serving.

BASED ON THE COSMOPOLITAN FILM HIT

CHAPTER XIV

Margery stood there, holding the door open, staring at Freddy Matthews, and trying to say something. She noted he wore dinner clothes under his top coat.

"Oh!" was all she could manage to say.

"I am sorry," Freddy said, "I am afraid I came to the wrong apartment. Does Miss Morrison live here? I am Mr. Matthews."

Then Margery realized that he did not recognize her. He had never seen her without her hideous disguise. She tried to think what to do or say.

"Miss Morrison? Oh—uh—" Margery gulped and made a new effort. "You mean Miss Margery Morrison?"

"I don't know her first name, but is she in?"

"Well—not—exactly—"

Margery was trying to think what to do.

"Not exactly? I am afraid—"

"I mean, I am expecting her. She went out—er—I think she is looking for another position."

Margery was beginning to think more clearly.

"Oh, she mustn't do that," Freddy exclaimed. "Look here, would you mind if I came in and waited for her?"

Margery thought. Good heavens, what shall I do now?

"Well, no, I wouldn't mind, but, you see, I don't know how long she will be gone."

"Thank you. He sat down and continued to feast his eyes on Margery. "I suppose," he said, "you are the young lady that Miss Morrison lives with?"

"Yes, that's right," Margery said, eagerly, "I am Miss Morrison's room-mate."

"I believe I heard her telephone you once—if I remember right, it is Miss—er—Miss Rogers, isn't it?"

"Yes, Mr. Matthews. Susie Rogers."

"Indeed—somehow that name doesn't seem to belong to you—er—no offense."

"Not at all."

HAD HE GUESSED?

Margery eyed him suspiciously. Had he penetrated her disguise before this, and was he making sport of her?

Susie, brushing her teeth, heard the murmur of voices and supposed it was her Boy Friend, Jake. She came out to the living room door in a rather scant and shabby kimono and was still brushing her teeth.

"Well, dumb-bell—"

Then she almost choked and tried to hide the tooth brush, for instead of Jake, here was a handsome stranger.

"Oh gee!" Susie gasped. "I'm sorry—I—"

She could say no more, but turned and ran back to the bath room. Freddy stared at her and then at Margery, whose face was red because of her efforts not to howl with laughter.

"Does SHE live here, too?" he asked.

"Oh no, she just—er—dropped in."

"Er—yer."

"Strange. Quite a number of people brush their teeth at home."

"Evidently not all. Really, Mr. Matthews, there is no telling when Miss Morrison will be back."

"That's all right with me, Miss Rogers."

Freddy was determined, at this time, to remain and get on friendly terms with this beauty who was supposed to be Miss Rogers.

Freddy was always one who could make lively conversation, and since Margery realized that he was admiring her, she was glad to listen and watch him. But all the time she was wondering how she was to ever get out of it.

FUN FOR SUSIE

Susie dressed and came out.

"I am awfully sorry," Susie said to Freddy. "You see, I thought you were Jake—that is—somebody else."

"That's all right, Miss—"

"Oh yes, excuse me. This is Miss Wilson, Mr. Matthews, Miss Sadie Wilson, a friend." Margery turned and gave Susie an imploring look. "Mr. Matthews is Margery Morrison's boss you know, Susie, and since Margery is out, he is waiting."

"Marge OUT——"

And then Susie understood. She remembered Margery's office disguise.

"And I don't know when she will be back," Margery continued. "I told him that perhaps Marge was looking for a new job. Mr. Matthews wants to see her and have her come back to work."

A NEW PROBLEM

The door buzzer sounded.

"That will be your friend, Jake, don't keep him waiting," Margery said.

Susie was still giggling. Margery nudged her.

"Good bye, Mr. Matthews, I do hope you don't have to wait too long for Marge—never can tell when Marge will get home."

She hurried out. When she opened the door Jake tried to step in, but she shoved him out and closed the door.

"Hey, what's-a idea, Sue?" he demanded. "I gotter practice." He held up his music roll.

"Yeah? Well, you can practice taking me out to dinner. Marge has got company."

"Is that so? And I ain't good enough——"

"It isn't that, Jake, you see it's Marge's boss, he's there waiting for Marge."

"Waitin' for her? You said she had company."

"Listen, dumb-bell, he doesn't know she's Marge, he doesn't know she's his secretary."

"Ain't seen her? And she workin' for him for weeks! Has she been hidin' under th' typewriter all th' time?"

"No, stupid! He knows Marge is his secretary, but he doesn't know Marge is Marge."

"Holy cats! Who does th' sap think Marge is?"

"Me."

"Listen. I'm goin' crazy—"

"You're telling me? Come along. We'll put on the feed-bag, Jake, and I'll explain in words of one syllable."

HE WOULDN'T GO

Margery felt relieved as she heard their voices outside the door die away. She laughed a bit uneasily, however.

"You mustn't mind Sadie, Mr. Matthews," she said, "I mean, what she said about Marge staying out all times of night."

"Not at all. Miss Morrison is not the—er—type to care to do that."

"But she might go to a theater, she often does that."

Freddy smiled at the beautiful girl.

"That's all right with me, Miss Rogers, I will stay until midnight, if necessary, or even later."

CONTINUED TOMORROW

It's an awkward situation for Margery. How can she explain without confessing about her disguise? And, if she does that, Freddy certainly cannot use her as a secretary and keep his mind on his work.

Bidding Full Strength

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

When your partner makes a very strong bid you should look at your hand and determine whether you have the minimum strength for a response.

If you have considerably more, you should avoid closing the auction with a bid which does not represent the full value of your hand.

South, dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

	♠ K J 10 9 ♡ K 9 7 3 ◇ 5 4 3 ♣ A 7
♠ 8 5 3 ♡ 6 2 ◇ K J 6 ♣ K Q 10 6 5	North West East South	♠ 7 4 2 ♡ 5 4 ◇ 10 9 8 7 ♣ 9 8 3 2
	♠ A Q 6 ♡ A Q J 10 8 ◇ A Q 2 ♣ J 4

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	5 ♡	Pass
6 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Note particularly North's raise to five hearts in the hand above. He decided that he would have responded with one spade and then raised three hearts to four even had his clubs been three to the Queen-Jack.

His doubleton Ace warranted a greater show of strength and, for want of a better bid, he raised to five hearts. South, with three Aces and an excellent fit with North's spades, accepted the invitation by going to six; and careful play brought the slam home.

West opened the King of clubs and declarer won with dummy's Ace. Two rounds of trumps were followed by four rounds of spades. On dummy's last spade declarer carefully discarded the deuce of diamonds rather than the losing club.

The contract apparently depended on the diamond finesse, but South could be sure of winning this finesse if he discarded the low diamond and would have only a 50 per cent chance if he discarded the club.

This paradox is explained by the fact that a finesse is sure to win if the player with the tenace is in a position to play last to the trick. South intended to make West lead diamonds. By saving his club he could force West to win with his Queen of clubs, after which a diamond return would ride up to the Ace-Queen, whereas a club return could be ruffed in the dummy while South discarded the Queen of diamonds.

By using care in discarding losing cards, South easily brought home what would otherwise have been an impossible slam contract.

"Your Figure, Madame!"

Do You Want to Be a Model?

By IDA JEAN KAIN

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

SO you want to be a model! You don't have to be tall, and you don't have to be beautiful. But you must have a good figure, perfect posture, a graceful walk and the poise of a princess.

These are the primary qualifications as set forth by Marianna Smilie, an authority on the training of mannequins.

"Height is not as important as most people think," says Miss Smilie. "The perfect model may be from five feet five inches tall to five feet eleven. That's with high heels. Even a comparatively short girl of only five feet three inches can step up in high heels and become a mannequin—provided she has the other qualifications."

The most important feature in the model figure is chest development, which is just as necessary to the wearing of a tailored suit as to the low-cut evening gown. With salt cellar hollows at the base of the throat and chest, the tailored garment wrinkles.

Flat chested models are out of date. With underdevelopment, the bust is not in normal position. The curve of the bust is at its loveliest with strong pectoral muscles and an erect posture.

"You do not have to work on posture and pectorals separately," Miss Smilie points out. "One exercise can be made to serve all puropses." As an effective single exercise, she suggests a variation of the back stroke, used in swimming, which can be included to advantage in your daily dozen.

Grasp light weight dumbbells in either hand and swing alternate arms in wide, backward swoops. Begin with one minute of this exercise, gradually increasing to ten minutes.

For the model figure the chest cannot be flat, but the tummy must be flat as a flapjack. The exercise to do it is walking up the wall, and then walking down again. Try this:

'Wall-Walking' Will Improve the Figure

Movement: "Walk" up the wall until the body is on a straight line from toes to shoulders, weight resting on head and shoulders. Hold. Slowly walk down the wall. Relax and repeat six times as a beginning. Later, twelve times.

Slim hips, of course, for silks and satins! Miss Smilie recommends the following exercise for dealing with excess hipline inches:

Lean against the wall, facing it, bracing yourself with the hands, slightly above the head. Kick backward with alternate legs. Raise the leg as high as possible and kick from the hips.

Send for the leaflet "Bust Development" Exercises or "Bust Reducing" Exercises, whichever you need. Enclose a stamped, addressed envelope to Ida Jean Kain, Boston Evening American.

Health Hints

CONTRIBUTING causes to excessive perspiration are a nervous temperament, faulty elimination, heavy foods and disregard for the laws of hygiene.

Bathe daily, change undies daily. Use an astringent bath powder all over the body, a deterrent in the armpits. Drink water freely, cutting down on tea and coffee.

Beatrice Fairfax

Should She Give Up Her Job and Go to Live With Children?

A letter written to this column by a mother of 60 might serve as a text for many mothers of that age, who are considering giving up.

The beckoning mirage is leisure—time to play, time to read, time to think and, as she says, be her own mistress.

But will she? Here's her letter:

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

"I'm 60 and still going strong. I have a very agreeable position, which I have held for a number of years, as hostess in a first class hotel. The clientele consists of families, independent women, and an occasional detached man who is as much appreciated as raisins in a pudding.

"There are not many transients, but I get acquainted with them and advise them about shops, sight-seeing, theaters and things like that. Many become warm friends. My salary is $125 a month, including room and board.

"I have a married son whose wife is delicate, and two beloved grandchildren of 10 and 12. I have a little put by, and my son would like to have me share their home and put some of my savings into reducing the mortgage on their suburban home. And, as he tells me, have a little rest and enjoy life.

"I am full of conflicting emotions. I love my son and his family, and would like to help them. I'd like to be more the mistress of my time than my position allows.

But in a way, I hate giving up my independence. If I put my savings into their home, it will be a case of cutting cables.

I couldn't go back to my job, nor could I undertake an investment I'm considering.

"The hotel management is well pleased with my work, and has never suggested retirement. I just don't know what to do.

MRS. V. S.

DEAR FRIEND:

It has been said often that no stairs are so hard to climb as those in another's house. True, even if the house is your child's.

If you were dependent and incapable of earning, it would be easy enough to suggest helping out the invalid daughter-in-law.

But for an able-bodied woman, happy in her work and earning a comfortable living, to quit, seems unwise.

A good many older women have written to this column, telling of awful experiences after giving up comfortable positions to live in their children's homes.

Despite the fact that good hard cash has often gone with them, their position is more or less that of a dependent. In the average American home, Junior and Sissy rule the roost, and rule it with a rod of iron.

It would be easier for you to join the too frequent parental Hallelujah Chorus if you had never had your own place in the world, your own money and your own independence.

But cheering along grandchildren, whose point of view might be painfully different from yours, is not the easiest thing to do.

Most men and women call it a day and knock off work too soon, and are wretchedly unhappy when they no longer have the job which kept them safe and sane—or at least as safe and sane as the average.

Jobs have a way of looking rosy and splendid in retrospect. I sincerely hope you won't "give up the ship."

BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I live in an impossible home. If it ain't my father making life unbearable for me, it's my mother. And when they give me a rest, my two brothers seem to do their utmost to embarrass and disgrace me. Honestly, I'm at my wit's end.

You see, Miss Fairfax, there is an understanding in our house that I'm not to have any boy friend. If I even look at a young man, there's a veritable riot.

What can I do? What could any girl do in a home like mine?

"CHELSEA."

MY DEAR CHILD:

You can stop making a martyr out of yourself. I don't believe the situation is even half as serious as you regard it.

Reading between the lines of your letter, I can see that you regard your parents as blind, ignorant individuals. That is not so. Remember that once both of them were in love. Otherwise they'd never have married and you wouldn't be in the world.

Perhaps, the young men with whom you are associating are not desirable. Or perhaps your parents have better plans for you.

Why don't you sit down and have a nice, friendly talk with Papa and Mama? This imagined martyrdom will never get you anything, unless it be a cell in the insane asylum.

Believing that the whole world is against one's self is a serious indication of a breaking mind. It is a feeling to be avoided as one would the plague. So, dear child, don't let it get you.

Remove the Tonsils in Summer

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

"WHAT should I do about my child's tonsils?" This is a question asked by many mothers at this time of the year.

At the beginning of the season the school doctor will notify the parents about the enlarged and diseased tonsils.

If the child goes through the school year without attacks of sore throat or upper respiratory infection he is lucky. In the majority of cases, the youngster loses a great deal of time and probably falls behind in his school work.

Under these circumstances, it is difficult to understand why there should be hesitation to have the tonsils removed.

A mother recently told me that the only reason she postponed the operation on her child was that she was afraid of it. I can understand this because, as a parent, I hate to have my child hurt.

But let me assure you, the removal of the tonsils and adenoids is considered a minor operation in the hands of a competent surgeon. Every precaution is taken to safeguard the safety of the child, and it is indeed a simple procedure.

OPERATION OR NOT?

Merely because the tonsils are enlarged is no reason why they should be removed. It is true that enlarged tonsils are frequently diseased tonsils, but this is not always so. However, if your child has enlarged tonsils, make sure that they are not infected.

If they are both enlarged and infected, they should be removed. On the other hand, if they are only enlarged, showing no evidence of infection, and the child has rarely suffered from a sore throat, I see no reason why they should be removed.

Bear in mind that in some instances the tonsils are so enlarged that the child is unable to breathe through his nose. If forced to breathe through his mouth all the time, the habit of mouth breathing is formed and is never overcome.

GOOD MANNERS

WEDDING RECEPTION

DEAR MRS. BEEKMAN:

1. Is it proper for the mother of the groom to give a bridal shower for her future daughter-in-law?

2. Is is proper for the person giving the shower to invite friends of the bride whom this person does not know? For instance, does a friend of the bride give a list of the bride's acquaintances to the person giving the shower?

B.

1. It is not considered in good taste for close relatives of the bride-to-be or of the groom-to-be to plan showers for the prospective bride. The reason for this is obvious—it does make the shower look too much like a "promotion" for gifts. Don't you agree?

2. Usually a close friend of the bride's plans the shower for other close friends of the bride. But it would be all right, under certain circumstances, for the hostess, if she is a close friend of the brides but perhaps doesn't know very well other close friends of the bride's, to ask the bride for a list.

WOMEN BALK EVICTION IN WORCESTER

Worcester, July 9—Barricading themselves in a Duxbury street house, two women repulsed a constable and a policeman today, one shot being fired at the latter pair after the constable had smashed a glass panel in the door.

According to Constable John O. Hellstrom he endeavored to serve an eviction notice on Mrs. Mary Curtin, who occupies the seven-room cottage with several daughters.

Mrs. Curtin, however, threatened him with a flatiron and a baseball bat, Hellstrom charged.

He went for aid, returned with Patrolman Patrick O'Keefe and shattered the glass in the front door. But just then a hand, holding a revolver, was thrust out through the hole and the revolver barked, a bullet whizzing past the pair outside, they said.

Constable and policeman retired in confusion—then went to police headquarters to determine if a warrant could be obtained to drive her and her companion out.

LaGuardia Ready To Take G.O.P. Aid

New York, July 9 (AP)—Republicans had assurance today that Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia is willing to seek reelection as the party's candidate.

"If the nomination comes to me from the Republican party at this time as it did in 1933, I shall accept such nomination," he told Republicans who presented a petition yesterday signed by 1100 names.

They are the invention of a San Francisco Japanese.

Jamboree Ends; Holland Next for Scouts

By EMILE HAJAR

Boston Boy Scout Acting As Special Correspondent for the Boston Evening American at the National Jamboree.

Washington, July 9—The National Scout Jamboree is over. We were reviewed by the President, then we began to break up camp in earnest. Our duffle bags containing cots, matttresses, blankets, canteens, etc., were crated, to be sent to Holland for the International jamboree. We're all set to go.

• • •

Bob Bittenbender, James Bierner and Ernest Gould, Troop 10; Hugh Harwood, Troop 5; Paul Crocker and Gus Root, Troop 11, and Phil Phaneuf, Troop 5, all of Newton, spent a good part of the day painting an outline of the New England States on the back of their tents.

It is planned to put this map on all the tents. Each scout will be asked to decorate a side of his tent as he pleases. The result will be on view on Boston Common, July 17, where we pitch camp for a final inspection before sailing for Europe.

• • •

In the evening all the boy scouts who will attend the World Jamboree in Holland were the main feature of the last pageant given in the Arena. Troop one of New England wore their red ponchos, troop two gave an exhibition of first aid.

"ALL-BRAN LIVES UP TO REPUTATION"

If you are troubled with common constipation, read Miss Bundy's enthusiastic letter:

"I used to feel poorly all the time—just down and out. After reading an advertisement about ALL-BRAN, I got a box. It has helped me ever since." Miss Mary Bundy, Bennettsville, S. C.

Laboratory tests show that Kellogg's ALL-BRAN brings "bulk" to exercise the intestines; vitamin B to tone up the intestinal tract.

Within the body, ALL-BRAN absorbs twice its weight in water. This soft mass gently clears the intestines in a safe, natural way—without any of the weakening action of pills and drugs.

Just eat two tablespoonfuls daily—with every meal in severe cases. Serve as a cereal with milk or fruits, or cook into recipes. Remember—ALL-BRAN is a food—not a medicine. You buy it at the grocery store. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

TUNA EXPLORERS JOINED BY EXPERT

FLORIDA GUIDE COMING HERE

New England ranking with Florida and California as a tuna and swordfishing coastline?

That's what the fishing enthusiasts behind the new project to thoroughlly explore and chart the tuna grounds off Provincetown, under the Cape Cod hook, are predicting.

• • •

And now comes a veteran tuna fisherman, guide to many outstanding fishermen of tropical waters, from Florida to enlist in the cause which already is backed by two sea-going power yachts, and a group of New England's most successful deep sea fishermen.

• • •

On the strength of the story in Tuesday's Boston Evening American, announcing first plans of the tuna expedition, Captain Frank Pierce, fishing guide from Florida to New Brunswick, of the yacht Miss Floridian, is going to join the Bay Staters for the August tuna fishing.

• • •

After reading the American's story, Captain Pierce called Warren Raymond of Dana Chapman's tackle shop, sponsor of the enterprise, to offer his services and boat, when the season becomes more advanced in August and September.

• • •

Flying to Bimini, British insular possession off the coast of Florida, Captain Pierce will follow the tuna and swordfish there during July, and return to pool his knowledge of the big deep sea sporters with the Massachusetts fishermen early next month.

• • •

Many salmon are running there now, but practically the only fishing is with nets.

• • •

Permits for netting are issued three times a week. However, the run of salmon should yield some good catches to a smart angler.

• • •

Frightened, the youth let go his rod, threw the snake on the bank, and the snake crawled into a wall.

Trading Post Site Sale Plan Stirs Cambridge Folk

Fearing that some "undesirable" enterprise may be started on the historic spot, prominent Cambridge club members were lining up today against the sale of 11,565 square feet of land in Winthrop square, Cambridge, said to have been used once as an Indian trading post site.

Robert W. Gray, Cambridge realtor who said he is acting for a client, Benjamin Frank, has offered the city $18,000 for the plot of land, which is just beyond Harvard square, near the Cantabrigia and Pi Eta clubs.

According to members of these organizations, it is feared the construction of a theater building, a liquor store or some other "undesirable" enterprise is contemplated.

Mrs. Frank W. Pfaff, president of the Cantabrigia Club, and Henry T. Dunker, member of the Pi Eta Associates, said their organizations will join in a protest against sale of the land.

Judges Are Smart; Take Vacations

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

The smartest birds in the legislative nest are the nine judges of the Supreme Court. While Washington is arguing about them they are on a vacation.

Bill Borah accuses Wheeler and Vandenburg of acting childish. Borah's crack may have been a play for the juvenile vote, for the Boy Scouts were in the gallery at the time.

If they ever boost the Supreme Court to 15 it won't be long before more judges will be getting in on two-weeks guest cards. Around 1940 judges will be smuggled over the Mexican border like coolie laborers.

P. S.: If President Roosevelt appointed Edgar Bergen to call the roll he might get the answers he wants.

Huntsville, Tex., July 9 (AP)—Four desperate convicts who escaped with five others from Eastham Prison Farm led baffled officers in a wild, zig-zag race across northeast Texas today.

Latest exploit of the fleeing felons was to overpower three state highway patrolmen near Alto and escape in the officers' car.

Since the nine escaped yesterday, one has been killed, a guard wounded, a civilian robbed of his automobile and four of the prisoners recaptured.

Cyclists Killed in Lawrence Crash

Lawrence, July 9—Charles Leupold, 21, of North Andover, died in Lawrence General Hospital today within an hour after his motorcycle and an automobile collided head-on here.

James Mealey, 38, of Andover, was held on technical charges of manslaughter and operating so as to endanger.

Mealey suffered possible internal injuries and was sent to Burke Memorial Hospital.

The collision, police said, tossed Leupold 28 feet. A companion motorcyclist, John Subatch, of North Andover, riding abreast of Leupold, escaped.

THIS IS LIFE

By

Robert E. Rogers

As usual, about this time of the year the question bobs up as to the comparative rights of the people who have invested money in summer resorts and those who have invested no money but feel they have an equal right to share the benefits other people have paid for

ROBERT E. ROGERS

Last summer the principal center of controversy concerned a public beach on Cape Cod: whether it was community owned or privately owned, closed to transients or open to trippers and squatters.

This year the opening gun has been fired by Mayor Charles D. White of Atlantic City, N. J., who objects to its half a million week-end visitors who invest no money nor spend any to speak of. He has the idea that these trippers for a day, who bring their lunches and dress in their cars and spend no money at the resort, shall be charged an "entrance fee" to Atlantic City and be given an equivalent in municipal scrip (or paper money), good only within the resort itself

Problem Complicated By Differing Conditions

"This would insure their making some contribution toward running this great park of ours," he says.

Of course the problem is not quite so simple as that. In some places the beaches and water-fronts are owned privately, and by state law can be closed both to the townsfolk and the casual visitors. This is the case in Massachusetts. In some states, as in Maine and Rhode Island, even the private estates must provide thoroughfares to the water-fronts for those who wish to use them.

In some cases the local town governments are trying to retrieve the "town landings" which have lapsed into private hands. In others, the state itself has bought or taken by eminent domain great tracts of beach or water-front, and has provided state bathing houses, restaurants and amusement centers, such as exist at Revere Beach, Nantasket and Salisbury, and to a certain degree at Hampton Beach. At other places, beaches like Bailey's at Newport or Craigsville on the Cape, there are strictly private beaches to which access is not easy.

Trailers Raise New Issue for Householders

These are difficulties peculiar to seacoast spots. Another, which increasingly is to be found wherever a trailer can make its way, gives promise of being a considerable nuisance everywhere. Trailers and their occupants seem to feel that they can park anywhere, levy on the neighbors for water and (sometimes) firewood, and go away in the morning without bothering to clean up any mess they may have left.

Householders who have bought or rented property are obviously at a disadvantage in the face of these nomads, and the townsfolk who earn their living from their shops and stores, to say nothing from taxes, water-rates, etc., are beginning to wonder whether there is any way of collecting from these fly-by-nights. They are becoming considerable of a problem.

South and west, I understand, municipalities are beginning to provide official camping places, with gas, electric light, water and sanitary facilities laid out for reasonable fees. There the community and the local stores profit from trailers' camps.

Plenty of Space For Temporary Quarters

All this makes a bothersome question, and it is not made any easier when the local authorities are so greedy for the casual and temporary money that frequently they do a grave injustice to the people who have invested money, bought land, built houses, improved beach property and supported local trade, and who obviously do not want their summer homes made uninhabitable by casual auto camps, collections of trailers, and the kind of people that all too frequently they involve.

On the other hand, there are plenty of places which are not suitable for permanent summer settlements, but which can offer pleasant temporary camping places for people who prefer that kind of summer life, or who cannot afford permanent quarters. Such places the state or the community ought to provide, and frequently can provide at a profit.

It is unfair that one portion of the community should pay the entire shot, while another and the greater part roves at its sweet will, paying little or nothing for what it, too, enjoys. Possibly Mayor White's notion at Atlantic City, which he foresees, will cause criticism and make trouble, is the fairest way out of a genuine difficulty.

CHARGE Somerville GRAFT

BOARD SESSION IN UPROAR

Startling charges of graft and hints of a district attorney's probe were hurled early today at a turbulent session of the Somerville board of aldermen.

Startling charges of graft and hints of a district attorney's probe were hurled early today at a turbulent session of the Somerville board of aldermen.

In the midst of an uproar at 3 a. m., Alderman Walter J. Moran charged several of his fellow members with vote buying, charged openly that a friend of Mayor Leslie E. Knox was "cashing in" to the tune of 15 per cent on city contracts and predicted jail terms for some in the event of an investigation.

Moran's blast came on the heels of passage of bills on bond issues, tax titles and appropriations by eight members of the board of 11 totaling $526,000.

Continually breaking into floor debates on issues and many times leaping off the floor to emphasize his points, Moran said in part:

"If the mayor and Tom Mooney weren't so selfish there wouldn't have been a single person cut off the Works Progress Administration, but the mayor wanted his whole borrowing program put through at this time

HINTS AT PROBE

"If the district attorney's office ever catches up, it will be too bad. It's pretty hot weather to be laying around in cells over in East Cambridge jail

"You have made enough money in these two years to buy every individual vote in this city. If you want the proof I'll give it to you

"You blame the poor unfortunates for your high tax rate, you try to kid the taxpayers into thinking the WPA is responsible for the 1936 tax rate of $41.90; you have the eight votes and at what price I don't know and I don't care

"Just as soon as the Emergency Finance Board passes anything it is rushed over the Hotel —— (a downtown Boston hotel) where Mr Tom Mooney says 'see the mayor,' and the mayor says 'I'll see what Tom says,' and Tom says 'I'll get 15 per cent' and gentlemen, 15 per cent of $150,000 is a [illegible] of a lot of money. You can run a great campaign on it

SAYS ACCOUNT BOOKS 'HOT'

"If you ever put the auditors' material account books out in the sun they'll burn to a cinder they're so hot now

"You hear about this truck being laid off and that truck being laid off, but you never hear about the mayor's trucks being laid off or those operated by J F Donovan"

Alderman John F Foster, militant opponent of Mayor Knox who has failed to put in an appearance at the last two meetings, was absent again today.

Bills passed for consideration by the emergency finance board today were $260,000 for tax title loans, $140,000 for sewer loans, $29,000 of this to come out of city levy, $14,000 water loans, $50,000 highway loans, $29,000 to come out of city levy, $17,000 for WPA and $5000 for a land damage claim in the erection of the Somerville police station in 1932

It was specified in the bills that the water, highway and sewer construction would come under WPA projects.

BADLY HURT IN DIVE FROM CAB

An attractive 24-year-old Medford girl was taken to the Cambridge City Hospital today suffering from a broken left arm and shoulder received early this morning when she leaped from a taxicab as it sped along Memorial Drive, Cambridge, near Technology.

The driver of the taxi, Philip L. Gilman, Henry street, Malden, suffered a severe shaking up and minor cuts when the cab crashed into a tree on the reservation after he lost control of his machine in an effort to prevent the girl from jumping from the cab.

The girl gave her name as Catherine Ha[illegible] of Winthrop street, Medford, and refused to give police any reason for her leap.

Stepmother Row Goes to Court

Bridgewater, July 9—Ludwig Imhoff, 48, of Attleboro today faced court on a charge of assault on the woman who married his father, 78-year-old prosperous farmer here. The elder Imhoff told police he fired a shotgun at his son in defense of his wife.

Police said an argument developed when Ludwig came to the Imhoff home to meet his stepmother and he struck her. His father ran for his shotgun and fired a blast at Ludwig as he drove off in his car.

The elder Imhoff's first wife died several months ago. He proposed to Mary Reis, 52, one hour after he had employed her as housekeeper and wed her despite his son's objections.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

By

Ann Marsters

We may not like these terrifically warm days in the city but we should remember that our good friend, the dog, likes them even less.

ANN MARSTERS

Most of the city dogs are spending their time on the Charles River Esplanade or near the Frog Pond where they can go wading and drink lots of water.

In several of the large cities the Humane Educational Societies have supplied watering troughs for dogs at various gasoline stations. They are white enameled pans on which is printed "Water for your dog."

But the Boston Humane Society is against such a plan because of the fact that there are practically no stray dogs in Boston, and that owners of dogs can always get water for them at any gasoline station just by asking for it.

This Dog Gets Daily Order of Ice Cream

We think it would be much nicer anyway to have troughs of vanilla ice cream for the dogs-about-town.

Telling Troubles Made Easy by Paid Listeners

A new vocation, that of professional listening, is making great strides throughout the country, particularly in Los Angeles where there are so many retired and well-to-do citizens who have little else to do but talk.

Several advertisements pertaining to this vocation have appeared in Los Angeles papers. One reads

And another:

"A sympathetic mature woman will listen to you talk Write for appt."

There is also the listener who advertises:

Cape Cod Snatches Smart Hollywood Orchestra

Hollywood is in the habit of snatching away our best Eastern orchestras—but here's one time when the situation was reversed. Little Cape Cod reached out to the coast and brought Paul Kain and his orchestra all the way from Hollywood's famous Clover Club. He's at the Barclay, in West Falmouth.

And we think that Marion Thompson, the beautiful blonde who sings with the orchestra, is one of the cleverest and most "different" young singers we've heard in a long time.

Mother Asks Quick Trial for Son

Claiming her son, Joseph Murphy, 20, was "railroaded" by police, Mrs. Mary Murphy, of Fifield street Dorchester, appeared at the district attorney's office today to demand a "quick trial" for him.

Murphy, who recently figured in the news as the husband of a 14-year-old child bride, is in Charles Street jail as a result of being unable to provide $3000 bail.

Earlier this week he was ordered held for the grand jury on a charge of breaking and entering a store and stealing $68.50.

Mrs. Murphy was informed by Secretary Leo Manning that because of the summer adjournment, the grand jury would not convene until next month and the case could not be heard before that time.

Later in superior Court Mrs Murphy made a motion for lower bail and Judge John E. Swift reduced it to $1000.

Boy Hurt in Fall From Tree

Haverhill, July 9—Rene Goudiere, 8-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Gideon Goudiere of Freemont street, fell 20 feet out of a cherry tree today and broke his leg. The boy was taken to Hale Hospital.

Esplanade Concert Series Opens

Fifty-two Esplanade concert musicians were hoping for a break in the weather today after they had shed their coats in unprecedented informality at the opening of the 1937 summer season last night.

Before a crowd of 13,000, half of them leaving their cool suburban homes for the humid heat by the Charles River Basin, the musicians rendered vigorous musical interpretations of Wagner's and Beethoven's symphonies but only after they had stripped to their shirt sleeves.

The program opened with Wagner's "Entrance of the Guests" from "Tannhauser," followed by Beethoven's "Second Movement from "Symphony No. 7" The crowning rendition was Handel's "Largo" from "Xerxes"

Sale of chairs was lowered by the heat, only 2500 being sold instead of the expected 5000. The fund is below the figures of other years, and it was reported there is only enough money for another week

If the fund is increased by public donations, the concerts will continue for four weeks.

Bob Quinn Takes National League Defeat to Heart

HIGH ON THE ROLL OF THIS PILLAR'S favorite people is Bob Quinn, the volatile president of the Bees' ball club. Though he has had his share of failure, Bob never whimpered over personal defeats in matters of money or ambition. But, now rising 68 after a lifetime in baseball, lickings on the ball field still cause a tumult in his soul.

Austen Lake

Thus, when the American All-Stars bounced the National All-Stars around in Washington, Bob felt nauseated gnawings and came home with a heft of woe on his chin. Defeat by a competitive concern meant a slur on the quality of his concern's goods, and a demonstration of the National League's inferiority.

It hurt.

The oddity in Bob's partisanship is that he was reared as a pious American Leaguer who had spent the golden years of his youth on that side of the fence. Until a few years ago when he sold his Red Sox interest to Tom Yawkey and moved to Brooklyn to become a financial sick doctor, no more militant American Leaguer ever breathed.

Mention of the National League was anathema in his ears. So that in his years with the Red Sox he had carried on a feud with the Braves and suspected their every action as an heathen menagie.

During the long period when the Yankees and Athletics were dominating the world series Bob glowed with league pride, little thinking that the time would come when the sight of an American League victory would send his spirit plummeting into his stomach.

Time and circumstance work curious changes in a man.

* * *

New Broom, Clean House

I HAVE WONDERED WHETHER, in his hirings and firings of the Braves alumni which he found when he helped to salvage the property from bankruptcy, Bob was not motivated by the old feelings which he carried when he crossed Commonwealth Avenue.

The word Braves was an execration, and he changed it. The players for whom he had formed a prejudice, leaked, one by one, away until now only Boby Smith, and a loyal little gent he, alone remains of that curious Fuchsian company. For Bill McKechnie, Bob had a non-partisan regard, and I have previously told how we were in the office at Fenway Park and Bob drew a sheet of scratch paper to list the existing major league managers who were worthy of the name, placing Bill's name at the top of only four.

So now, and I am speculating, Bob has deserted St. Petersburg, Fla., as a training grounds, though St. Pete always seemed to be the prize location in the South, with larger payloads of tourists, a climate neither too hot nor too cold, a field comfortably close to the hotel, and no honky tonk delights to distract the minds of the ball players from their work.

But Bob didn't like it from the moment he took command, moving [illegible] the old waterfront tavern where the Braves had lived in [illegible] with [illegible] and [illegible] show room.

He didn't like it because the city fathers were negligent in surfacing the park. The uptown hotels lacked food facilities. The surroundings, though paradisical for old folk, were depressing to a [illegible] youth. The locker room roof leaked. Pigeons defiled the [illegible].

But inwardly, I suspect Bob was prompted by embittered memories of the old Braves, and the very soil of St. Pete was impregnated with the stench of something malodorous.

I know that we who travelled with Bob's gypsying from San Antonio, to New Orleans, to Brandenton, to Pensacola, to Savannah, enjoyed the shifting scenes and the curious adventures, and I am sure that we who make up his foster family will be glad to gypsy with him some more.

He always squirmed uncomfortably in the stiff plush of the plate glass lobby where he took the Bees uptown to reside, and there were distasteful swivellings about his nostrils when he took his late evening constitutionals along the thoroughfares which teemed with elderly life and where stores filled with tourist gauds. So, internally, I am sure he was saying "Faugh" if not "Phooie."

* * *

He Has a Folksy Touch

I KNOW THIS TOO: THAT WHATEVER the folksy feeling was he engendered among his journalists who, truth bids me tell, were pretty trying to his puritanical patience at times, they, one and all preferred the homespun comforts and cordial society of his Bees to the artificial and secretative surroundings of the wealthy Red Sox.

Nor was it that Bob catered to the gluttony of the newsmen. Merely that he moved on their levels and opened to them the inner recesses of his mind, gossiping on all the little intimacies and never insisting on his opinion.

Oddly, I don't think Bob was popular with the New York and Brooklyn authors, who saw only his obdurate, testy side when he was trying to cure the daffiness in the Dodgers. The newsmen frequently laid him out in lavender, choosing to misread his motives and to pour him over with editorial blasphemy.

But Boston had seen him suffer during the raggetty Red Sox period when he was trying to rear a set of adolescent lunatics like Billy Rogell, Red Ruffing, Jack Rothrock, Big Ed Morris, Eddie Connolly and similar squirrel-cage assortments.

There were times when, if he had had a whistle in his hat, his inner steam would have made him sound like a peanut roaster. And times when he came down from his roof coop after losing a ball game with walnut bulges at the back of his jaws and an apoplectic purpling in his complexion. And times when he would regard the immense vacuity of his stands, with acres of absentee patrons, and would lament that just for lack of nine adult athletes a half million in profits was being discouraged at the gate.

So, we grew to like Bob for himself instead of for his free beer and we got fond of suffering with him sympathetically. So that now, if he wishes to suffer a little extra over the National League's licking by the American, out of habit we will throb reciprocal throbs for a good guy who is a little fanatical about the game which started 100 years ago in a Copperstown cow pasture.

Good News From Home

Brown Hits Chutes at Revere

It was quite unintentional, to be sure. Milton Green, former Harvard track great, was only trying to affect a nice gesture of hospitality to the stars of the Oxford-Cambridge track team who compete in the Stadium tomorrow.

Never for a moment did Green, now a student at Harvard Business School, figure that near disastrous results would follow in the wake of a purely social evening.

That nice gesture, however, came very near being the undoing of Arthur Godfrey Kilner Brown, India-born captain of the visiting forces and reputed to be the world's greatest quarter-miler.

It was a warm evening. Sea breezes beckoned.

So Green, recalling the hospitality which made his trip to England two years ago one grand and glorious occasion, acted as chauffeur and host to several of the Britons [illegible] an evening [illegible] to Revere Beach.

TRY THE RIDES

To say they were thrilled by the many side show attractions is putting it mildly. They were like a bunch of kids released from a long term of confinement.

All went well until Brown glued his eyes on the thunderbolt roller coaster.

There was a [illegible] something awesome and challenging a [illegible] manhood.

Now Green is an old-timer at Revere Beach. He has tasted aplenty the thrills the resort has to offer and was satisfied to let well enough alone.

But against his wishes and fearful of the dire consequences which might follow should the untoward happen to Brown, the man who almost singlehandedly is expected to win [illegible] meet for Oxford-Cambridge against Harvard-Yale, he finally overcame his [illegible] and consented a fling.

That first long drop into the breezy ether and Brown's inner being sort of rebelled. The next and he was tossed with a shocking force against the side retaining arm.

SOLO FLIGHT

On the third drop Brown's tortoise shell glasses, part and parcel of his being, without which—his only pair—he would be lost, went flying into space headed for the darkened [illegible] far below.

Fortunately Brown's wild stab into space picked the spectacles [illegible] of the air [illegible] side trip. The [illegible] and Brown [illegible] for the experience.

In fact, nothing would suffice Brown less than another of the same experience. Here was something new to challenge his gameness.

"No more of that for me," he states. "When I think of what might have happened, what came so close to happening, I realize how foolhardy I was to permit Brown and his colleagues to risk the venture."

Be that as it may, the Englishmen are now whole and sound in wind and limb for the big international track and field meet at the Stadium tomorrow. And perhaps the beach experience may actually aid Brown into a new world record for the quarter mile, his ambition.

Boston Evening A[illegible]

Wins G. B. Open Title With 290

Carnoustie, Scotland, July 9 (INS)—Henry Cotton, Great Britain's greatest golfer, today won the British open golf championship with a sub-par final round of 71 and a four round total of 290.

Playing under conditions so bad that the championship committee twice inspected the course with a view to canceling the fourth and final round, the Englishman showed his mettle by making sensational shots down waterlogged fairways through casual water and over greens that were actually submerged from a terrific downpour.

But neither wind nor water nor a three stroke deficit going into the final round could stop the man who won the title in 1934 to break a stranglehold Americans had on it for many years.

The Americans were no where today. Only Charley Lacey, the New Yorker who was ineligible for Ryder Cup play because he was born in England, had a chance. He needed a pair of threes on his last two holes to tie and he wasn't equal to the occasion.

SHUTE IN TOUGH ROUND

Byron Nelson had a fine 74 considering the conditions under which he played but that made his total only 296. At that he was one stroke better than big Ed Dudley who finished with a 75, 297 and two ahead of Alf Padgham the defending British champion who wound up with 298.

Reggie Whitcombe, one of three great British golfing brothers, who led at the end of the second and third rounds took a 76 for his final whirl and finished with a total of 292.

Denny Shute had a miserable 80 for his last 18 holes bringing him up to 302. Walter Hagen splashed through the rain for a final 81 and a 309 total and Johnny Revolta finished far in the [illegible] with [illegible].

Lacey made a fine finish going out in 36 and back in the same figures but a 72 left him with a total of 293, one stroke behind Reggie Whitcombe and three behind the new champion.

Fred Wright His Old Self

The Scituate-Plymouth "Either or Both" and the Stoney Brae open tournaments started this morning, and both should attract large fields today and tomorrow.

Dan Shea, Jr., South Shore, won the combined gross of the "Either or Both" last year, and he's back today, along with John Pyne, a clubmate, who was awarded the low gross for Scituate defending his title Win S. Cobb, Jr., Charles River, was low man at Plymouth a year ago.

At Stoney Brae, the tournament is a four-ball event, which allows each player one-half of his state handicap as the strokes come on the card. And, instead of the usual two bucks per player, Stoney is operating on a cut rate price, two for $3.

Wilfred Crossley hit his stride while beating Emory Stratton, 7 and 6, in the second round of the state championship at Winchester. He was out in 33, three under par figures, despite the terrific heat, and four under par when the match ended at the 12th hole.

It will be a miracle if Art Rogers doesn't suffer a letdown today against Freddie Wright. Art is not exactly a husky youngster and the heat took its toll yesterday while he was beating "Bunny" Wilson, 3 and 2, and Walter Hunt, Jr., Cohasset, in a 22 hole match.

For the second time since he returned to state amateur competition, after allowing his title to go by default in 1933, Wright has reached the quarter finals of a state championship. After a lapse of two years, he qualified at The Country Club in '34 and stepped through Dave Whiteside and Jimmy Dolan, only to be stopped by Johnny Nies. Then, for the next two years, he was a first round victim, losing to Shirley Moulton at Brae Burn and to Dick Ruggles last year at Charles River.

Wright has been scrambling at Winchester since the first qualifying round. He looked like "The Master" of old. Back in the days when he had the "hex" on the boys, he was far more dangerous when he was swaying shots all over courses than when he was straight down the fairways. There isn't a player in the field as capable of getting out of trouble as Wright.

Britons See Bees, Phils

Entirely satisfied with the condition of the Oxford-Cambridge track team on the eve of tomorrow's international rivalry with Harvard-Yale at the Stadium, the British coaches have ordered rest today, and the entire visiting team will be found enjoying the Bees ball game at the Beehive today against the Phillies.

Captain Godfrey Brown and his mates are the most interested in seeing the American game of baseball.

Beats Art Rogers, 4 and 3, in Uphill Battle

By BILL GRIMES

Winchester Country Club, July 9—Despite the terrible heat, the old timers came through with flying colors in the quarter-finals of the 33rd Massachusetts Amateur championship this morning at the Winchester Country Club.

Dave Whiteside, New Bedford, who is 47 years of age, produced the biggest upset of the championship by defeating Wilfred Crossley, Norfolk, who was an odds on favorite after the golf he shot yesterday. Whiteside was obliged to come from behind to win. He was 2 down at the turn due to Crossley's eagles at 2nd and 8th holes, but he squared the match with birdies at the 12th and 13th.

Freddie [illegible] time winner of the [illegible] Art Rogers [illegible] 4 and 3 [illegible] was three [illegible].

At the 4th Whiteside was short [illegible] dropped back [illegible] off the 7th tee was [illegible] into the woods but hit a tree and came back on the fairway. Crossley was on nicely with his second and took the hole, after which he holed about a 60-foot putt for an eagle at the 8th to [illegible] up.

Starting on the 9th tee Whiteside was in a tough spot for he was three down with only ten holes to play. The Whaling City veteran is a fighter and he went right to work on the [illegible].

After Crossley had dropped his second [illegible] at the 9th, Whiteside [illegible] took the hole with a [illegible] halved the 10th and 11th and then Whiteside

Fette on Mound Against Phillies

Bees' Star Seeks 10th Victory

Boston Bees, refreshed by a four day layoff, open a first division drive against the Phillies at the Beehive this afternoon.

In fifth place now, 13 games in the rear of the league leading Chicago Cub, and five games to the good over the lowly Phillies, the Bees, winner of 10 of their past 12 games, have hopes of cleaning up their four game engagement with the Jimmy Wilson men and thereby creep further up the ladder.

BUSH TOMORROW

The St. Paul right-hander, attempting to hit double figures in the win column, will be followed by Guy Bush, the Mississippi Mud Cat, in Saturday's game, with Jim Lanning and Jim Turner probably getting the Sabbath assignment.

Lanning is to get his chance at starting [illegible] thanks to his recent feats of pitching to 15 batters in a row [illegible] one of them get to first base.

MACFAYDEN BENCHED

In contrast, Deacon Danny MacFayden will be used only infrequently as a starter [illegible] until he solves the problem of getting by that one bad inning. A year ago MacFayden hurled 17 victories.

This year he has gotten into one bad jam in every game, mostly ones which eventually lost him the decisions.

The Phillies have been playing [illegible] since the season opened. Last week the Bees [illegible] them over the hurdles [illegible] of two straight victories.

BRITISH Cup Team HIT HARD

London, July 9 (AP)—Great Britain's hope of retaining the Davis Cup emblem of international tennis supremacy were dealt a crushing blow today when George Patrick Hughes withdrew from the squad because of a breakdown following overexertion and strain. He will be replaced by Frank H. D. Wilde.

Hughes, one of the world's finest doubles player, had been counted upon to team up with C. R. D. Tuckey in doubles. Together they figured to give any combination tossed in against them in the challenge round a tough fight.

Expert forecasts have indicated Great Britain will need to win the challenge round doubles if it is to have any hope whatever of retaining the cup. With Hughes out, the British hardly can hope to salvage the doubles. H. W. (Bunny) Austin and young Charles Hare will handle the singles assignments.

Which nation will face the British in the challenge round has not yet been determined. Germany and Czechoslovakia [illegible] clash in the European zone finals with the survivor tackling the United States for the right to challenge Great Britain.

Budge Disliked Tennis At First

Universal Service presents herewith the third of a series of stories on the life and tennis career of Don Budge, who achieved the highest prize in tennis by winning the world championship at Wimbledon

By HARRY BORBA

San Francisco, July 9—"Aw, I was just lucky!"

John Donald Budge, age 15, came home from Berkeley Tennis club on the evening of June 14, 1930, and made that simple declaration. It has become a byword in the Budge family.

Every time Don wins a tennis match he explains, "I was lucky."

LIKED BASEBALL

Young Don was the boy champion of the state of California in his very first public effort. He beat Paul Newton. Both had been surprise finalists to the tourney committee because they were not seeded.

That was the last of tournament entries for John D. Budge in 1930.

"That's a sissy game," he told eager brother Lloyd. Besides he had a chance to play center on the University high basketball team. And it was swell baseball weather, too.

At this juncture there entered the person whom the Budges declare has had much to do with the career of Don.

LIKES BING CROSBY

He warned young Don about [illegible] and its effects upon growing youth and about cigarettes.

Grown out of the boys class in 1931, young Budge entered the state junior singles. It was still tennis and not titles with him when he encountered Jay Cohn, who had been national boys' champion in 1930.

"I've got to hear some more Bing Crosby recordings before I go," he explained to his mother.

[illegible] was over and Don [illegible] had been drawn.

When the referee [illegible] Budge's match [illegible] respond. Young Cohn was on the court industriously warming up and practicing strokes. In their Lloyd finally found Don upstairs asleep in a chair. He awakened him and preceded him down stairs.

As they walked out on the club house porch Don spied a fence with a pipe for the top rail [illegible]. This fence extended to the court where he was to play the former national champ. It was too [illegible] he walked out on it, balancing himself with his racquet.

"WHAT HAPPENED?"

The gallery, already Budge-conscious, howled with laughter. Don [illegible] jumped off the fence and grabbed Brother Lloyd by the arm.

"What happened?" he asked, completely unconscious of the fact they were laughing at him.

Needless to say he won from Jay Cohn and went on to take the state junior singles title. But it was still a game to kill.

At this point Jim Kinney took the youngster into the Pacific Northwest. There he accumulated several junior titles and scared the whey out of such seniors as Henry Prusoff and Elmer Griffin.

Returned home, young Don confessed he liked tennis a little better. He liked the opportunity to see some of the country and it was fun being with the young tennis crowd after one got acquainted with its members.

50 GIRLS Take Up Sculling AT HARVARD

"Feather oars!"

"Reach for it!"

"Hands away quickly!"

But instead it's "Admiral" Blake Dennison, the coach of Harvard's summer school co-ed crew force [illegible]

Perhaps foremost among Coach Dennison's pupils is Katherine Campbell of Cambridge, a fledged veteran. Miss Campbell, whose father is a member of Harvard's [illegible], is also a member of the Wellesley College crew.

Girls from many states are learning the art. From near and far they come to Harvard [illegible] late in the afternoon stroll down to Weld Boathouse [illegible] but on the opposite bank.

They don regulation crew "sox," perhaps have a few minutes on the water machines where faults are pointed out by Coach Dennison and then go out for a long pull up or downstream in the placid waters of the Charles.

Boxing Results

Second Place Sox Goal As They Start on Road

Eight Tilts With A's, Browns

By JOE CASHMAN

Philadelphia, July 9—The three-day armistice in the big league flag wars ended, the Red Sox swing into action against the Athletics this afternoon in what to date has been the most one-sided rivalry in either circuit.

Six games the Cronin charges and the men of Mack have played, and the standing is 6-0 in favor of the former.

NEWSOM TODAY

So maybe our heroes will actually enjoy a road engagement for a change. [illegible] is possible with the mercury flirting with the 100 mark.

[illegible] reasoning this [illegible] arguments stood:

1—That the National League seems to have placed too much emphasis on the supposed unbreakable defense of its big three pitchers and not enough on mass run production.

2—That an extra base wallop delivered with men on the bags, such as those thumps by Lou Gehrig and Red Rolfe Wednesday, is still the best insurance against a whipping.

3—That the individual performances of the Yankees and Cubs in the midsummer classic, together with their recent league doings, makes it appear at this writing that a New York-Chicago World Series is more than a pipe dream.

WHITESIDE Beats Favorite, CROSSLEY

He [illegible] at his ball, running it through the rough and stony for a win, for Crossley hooked his second and was a trifle too strong with his [illegible]

[illegible] square the match [illegible] the 18th [illegible] Whiteside [illegible] 17th [illegible] with a six which took Whiteside [illegible] then Dave took the home hole to win two up.

Freddie Wright was striking as he has been a week against Art Rogers [illegible] he showed that he is one of the greatest competitors [illegible] New England and by the way he overtook and finally beat his younger opponent.

Rogers started to fade at the 10th where he was one up by missing his drive and then they both messed up the short 11th which [illegible] probably was the pointing point of the match.

Wright hooked his tee shot out into the 11th fairway and Rogers was trapped to the right of the green. Wright's second hit the bank and stopped about a foot from the cup. Then Rogers flubbed two shots [illegible] trap and was on in four.

Wright's ball was well up in the deep grass on the bank and when he attempted to pitch on it went up over his head and down the banking.

WRIGHT SHORT

Then Wright played a magnificent recovery to within five feet of the cup and when Rogers missed a long putt for his five Wright holed his and won the hole to take the lead for the first time.

After halving the 12th, Wright birdied the long 13th to become two up and increased his lead to three at the short 14th where Rogers underclubbed and caught a trap. Then, Wright thought that he'd played enough for one morning and took the 15th and the match with a par four.

Erratic putting cost Eddie Martin his chance to reach the semi-finals. He and Peterson halved the first five holes and then Eddie went into the lead at the 6th where Pete was trapped. A partial stymie at the 7th allowed Peterson to square the match at the 7th and then the Oak Hill player went two up by taking the 8th with a birdie.

Mutuel Machine Workings Explained

Mr. Boston Cools Off at Revere

By JACK CONWAY

IT WAS SO HOT in the city that the sidewalks were melting and the skyscrapers (still miniature sized compared to those in New York or even in Fort Worth, Texas) were drooping. I didn't want to risk the roof of one of our big city buildings coming down and hitting me on the head.

Mr. Boston

I have watched Christmas candles in a heated room, and have seen them eventually end up in a horizontal position like British heavyweights used to do in the days before Tommy Farr, the Welshman who fights Joe Louis in New York in August.

I went to Revere Beach to get some cooling breezes, and then like most other people who go there I wound up at the Wonderland Park Dog Track.

Mike Green, who has been associated with the boxing game as a player and boxer for these many years, looked cool and happy as he paraded around in front of the press gate. He passed me to Emergency Kelley, oldtime boxer, who is boss of the press gate at Revere as he did at Rockingham Park.

SPEED OF MUTUEL DEPARTMENT

"I have worked for Mortimer Mahoney most of my life," said Heisman. "I think Mort has taught me everything there is to know about the working of a mutuel plant."

"Every time the new figures and odds are flashed on the board it is called a cycle," said Dave. "We give these cycles at intervals of a minute and a half so that the public will be able to keep posted on what dogs the money is being wagered."

GREYHOUNDS FLYING AT FINISH

I VIEWED THE finish of a race [illegible]

"I have worked with many officials in sport," said Hugh McGrath, famous starter and timer, "but none of them surpasses Fisher for ability."

[illegible]

Judges at dog tracks must be alert in calling finishes as the greyhounds are flying then. I asked Fisher if a dog is ever disqualified.

"No," he replied. "They are expected to do a little bumping. I think that of itself helps convince the public the greyhounds are in there doing their best to win."

The Racing Commission has Frank Parle as its judge with John Sullivan as associate judge and Dr. James Hanley and Dr. Albert Welsh as veterinarians.

I was interested at the precautions the Racing Commission uses in checking the dogs before a race. It employs the Bertillon system and has a card on every dog.

Every mark on the dog as well as his breed and history is contained on the card. The dogs are checked by the Bertillon system [illegible] was the dogs [illegible]. They [illegible] in front of a [illegible] window, and we [illegible] clear view of [illegible] who watched [illegible] see them.

"The best way to gain public confidence for a sport is to keep everything out in the open," said Chairman Connors.

The dogs are turned over to the veterinarians representing the Commission at 6 o'clock each night, and are under the closest possible supervision from then until they are let out of their boxes in the wild chase after Swifty.

Before leaving Wonderland Park, I checked in on "Young" Happy who has been talking dog racing to me for these many years. I found him tearing up a bunch of mutuel tickets.

"I had three dogs running for me, and a 'dark horse' came in and won," complained Happy as we cooled off with the aid of some beer.

Newport, R. I., July 9 (AP)—The Eastern Yacht Club, as a preliminary to the America's Cup races which start here July 31, announced today plans to rematch Rainbow and Endeavour I, the yachts which battled in 1934 for the international trophy.

J. Amory Jeffries [illegible] the Marblehead [illegible] received from Frederick [illegible] owner of Endeavour [illegible] an invitation to race against Rainbow on [illegible] either [illegible] Yankee was [illegible] to take part.

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA

A Nationwide Organization Devoted To American Youth in Aviation

By L. F. ROSS
Boston Wing Commander

With inquiries reaching wing headquarters from all parts of New England in letters, phone calls and personal visits, Junior Birdmen are indicating a widespread interest in the nation-wide contest to be announced on the Birdmen page of the Boston Advertiser this coming Sunday.

JUNIOR BIRDMEN
OF AMERICA
(Membership open to all boys and girls 10 to 21)

I wish to join the Junior Birdmen of America. I enclose a dime (well wrapped) for my gold wings and other membership materials.

City .... State ....

My Age Is Now.................... (Give Your CORRECT Age)

Mail to Junior Birdmen, Boston American Wing, 100 Summer St., Boston, Mass.

Having been assured that the contest does not involve the making of model planes or writing of essays or art work of any kind, hundreds have been unable to guess the nature of the competition. And their curiosity has reached a high pitch.

The secret will be out when the full details of the contest will be revealed in the Birdmen section of the Boston Advertiser the day after tomorrow.

The chance of winning a three weeks vacation cruise through the Panama Canal and a flight home from Los Angeles or a transcontinental flight to Hollywood or one of the other 10,000 prizes to be offered to winners has excited the interest of thousands of members throughout the country.

The chief winner will not only fly to New York and board the steamer California for a cruise to Los Angeles but may be accompanied by a parent or adult friend.

The other 16 sectional winners may have their choice of a flight to Hollywood or New York. The New England winner will undoubtedly choose the trip in a United Air Lines "Mainliner" to Hollywood where he or she will be given a three day vacation.

This will include the meeting of Hollywood celebrities, and visits to Catalina Island, Malibu Beach and other famous resorts.

In addition to these thrilling and unforgettable flights, there will be more than 10,000 other awards making it possible for nearly every contestant to win something.

The best thing about the contest is that all Junior Birdmen will have an equal chance to win. The younger members will have just as much chance as the older ones and girls will be able to compete with the boys on the same footing.

Andrew T. Kusmer, of Willimantic, Conn. (left), was the contestant who came from the most distant point to compete in the recent wing championship tournament at Franklin Field. With him is Gordon Cain, Hyde Park, winner of the glider event with a flight of 3 minutes, 21 3-5 seconds. Kusmer made a flight of 30 seconds in that event. Rain forced a postponement of the contest until the following day and Kusmer was unable to return.

Funnies On the Air

Radioland Reflections

By N. F. T.

TODAY'S hot tip, and how could a tip or anything else be other than piping this weather, would seem to be the broadcasting by Bing Crosby as a sporting event announcer (WBZ) at 9 o'clock this evening.

Bingus will do the describing of the Motion Picture Handicap, a race involving bang tails owned by screen stars and taking place at Turf Ded Mar, the picturesque track just opened and operated by Crosby and his fellow film personalities.

Word in hand certainly [illegible] that the Turf Del Mar is a beautiful site and delight to see, situated just 800 feet from the Pacific Ocean, near San Diego, in California. A number of certain customers in these parts have written to say that the opening program from Turf Del Mar was one of the best all around airings heard on the air in many moons. That was last week.

SHORT SPARKS

Talking with [illegible], the maestro who [illegible] that 22-piece orchestra of girls called the "Hour of Charm," your typewriter tapping tattle-tale learns that his biggest worry is watching out for signs of romance among the lassies. P. S. is in town with his bevy of musical maids. They are gorgeous girlies every one, which largely accounts for the multitudes trekking toward the Metropolitan Theater to see them make music, said snappy rhythm being a big part of the reason also.

From time to time the [illegible] has had reason to [illegible] the tall dark and [illegible] WCOP staffer.

Jim is formerly of our American personnel, a good reporter and proving equally alert as a broadcaster. Example, yesterday when it was warmer than well, get that "w" in there Mr Linotyper, this Donovan chap ups and assumes he can fry an egg on the sidewalks of Tremont street during his thoroughfare interview period from 2 45 to 3 o'clock.

He encountered Bob Crosby, brother of the above mentioned Bing, and together they worked the stunt. They actually started the hen fruit sizzling [illegible] went gunky when they tried to turn it over. They should have figured on scrambling it. They were nearly pinched, by the way.

AGAIN FOR ALLEN

Just as so many suspected, Fredericke Allen didn't mean it too much when he said he was not coming back to broadcast a full hour for the same sponsor next [illegible]. Right here is a telegram fresh from Fred Wise in New York, the sponsor signer upper. It says [illegible] show, the same sponsor, the same time, a [illegible] but Fred is not a fellow to fabricate.

A big time in store for the HtQ Radio Club of Lynn tomorrow afternoon. Members are heading for their annual Hamfest and Banquet at Topsfield Fair Grounds. The merrymaking 'hams' will eat steamed clams, hot dogs and have barrels of brew to quaff beginning at 12 noon, rain or shine.

• • •

P[illegible] Holmes, the movie actor, is in town and comes in for a 'make' turn to be queried by John (Red) Reilly, the busy WMEX program planner at 2 o'clock this afternoon from the WMEX studios.

• • •

Clem McCarthy, the horse race and box fighting radio informer, begins finding it necessary to issue denials about him being related to Charlie (dummy) McCarthy of Edgar Bergen fame.

Somebody should start a "Keep K[illegible] Klub" on the local schedules with "We're Havin' a Heat Wave" for the theme tune.

TURNS TONIGHT

The popular "Hollywood Hotel hour (WEEI) looms in fine fashion between 9 and 10 o'clock this evening. Francis Lederer and Madeleine Carrol have a preview version of the picture, "It's All Yours," to offer and will be presented as usual by Louella Parsons, the noted Boston American screen critic and columnist.

• • •

Outdoor concerting by Arthur Fiedler and 50 Boston Symphony musicians will get under way at the Charles River Esplanade bandstand (WAAB), to be heard on the air tonight from 8 30 to 9 p. m.

• • •

Bob Crosby and his boys opened at the Ritz-Carlton Roof last night. He has a WEEI hookup arranged for taking the air while spending the next few weeks hereabouts. Personable as all get out, is Bob, and a band leader extraordinary, too!

• • •

The amusing story of Solomon Ross, who, after going West to seek fame and fortune, deludes his family back home into believing that he is eminently successful in his new surroundings, will be told by the "Old Ranger" during the "Death Valley Days" half hour (WBZ) this evening at 8 30 p. m.

The coat lands on the shapely if unaccustomed shoulders of provocative Jean Arthur. At the minute she's riding a bus and wearing a little marked-down number. Consternated she hops off the bus and starts buzzing doorbells to find the coat's owner, and who should she run into but Arnold, who identifies the coat but insists that she keep it.

Two Tonics Could Send U.S.A. Ahead

Namely, Congress Should Adjourn Early; Roosevelt Should Strive to Curb Labor Leaders

By B. C. FORBES

Two tonics, if adopted, would vigorously stimulate business, re-employment and security values.

B. C. Forbes

First: Official announcement that Congress will adjourn reasonably early.

Second: A definite expression from President Roosevelt against every form of violence and a statement that he will recommend to the next session of Congress the passage of legislation fastening legal responsibility upon labor leaders and unions.

"No chance!" you may exclaim. But let's see.

The President no longer is having things all his own way with Congress. Opposition has developed to practically every major administration bill, including his Supreme Court plan, the government reorganization bill, the wages-and-hours bill (the new NRA), the AAA, the proposed "seven sisters of TVA," etc.

It may be, therefore, that before long President Roosevelt will decide to postpone showdowns in various matters keenly opposed, especially should legislators continue to manifest increasing independence.

Another consideration: President Roosevelt has already found it advisable to leave Washington so frequently that with the advent of sizzling weather he and his physicians may conclude that early ending of Congress will be in the interests of his health.

It may be significant that Vice President Garner decamped from Washington weeks ago. The real story behind this extraordinary action has not yet been publicly told.

A labor reporter close to John L. Lewis declares that an open break between him and President Roosevelt is in the cards. Lewis apparently feels that Mr. Roosevelt latterly has not shown due appreciation of his enormous financial contribution and vote contribution to Mr. Roosevelt's re-election. It will be recalled that Mr. Lewis announced in amazingly bold terms that, having pulled Candidate Roosevelt's chestnuts out of the fire for him, he counted upon Mr. Roosevelt to return the favor in full measure.

It is unthinkable that America's chief magistrate could uphold illegal tactics by any citizen or group. That the CIO has indulged in illegal practices is squarely on the record.

The other day, Madam Perkins came out in condemnation of sit-down strikes, whereas formerly she had consistently refused to do so.

One more consideration: Intimates of Lewis have made no secret of the fact that his ambition is to be elected President of the United States. A fantastic notion? Perhaps; perhaps not.

Suppose Lewis and his CIO succeeded in bringing every important industry to its knees, succeeded in enforcing the closed shop throughout the length and breadth of the land, succeeded in enforcing payment of higher wages, succeeded in curtailing work hours, succeeded in becoming the undisputed labor dictator of America, might he not become a formidable candidate for the presidency in 1940?

On the whole, not a little that is heartening has been happening lately.

Wall Street Briefs

New York, July 9—General Electric Co. orders received in the first half of this year increased 59 per cent over the like 1936 period. Orders totaled $217,265,619 compared with $136,968,597 last year. The record first half was in 1929 when orders amounted to $220,716,456. Second quarter orders this year totaled $111,518,589, an increase of 44 per cent and the largest quarter since the third period of 1929.

W. C. Grunow, former president of General Household Utilities Co., has been elected chairman of the board and will be succeeded by Harry Alter.

Electric output of United Gas Improvement System for the week ended July 3 totaled 86,848,985 kilowatt hours, a gain of 10.8 per cent over a year ago. In the preceding week output showed a gain of 6.6 per cent over the like 1936 period.

June sales of McCrory Stores Corp. declined 2.3 per cent from the like month last year. Sales totaled $3,365,000, compared with $3,443,416 in 1936. Six-month sales totaled $18,381,033, against $17,-693,154 last year, an increase of 3.9 per cent. May sales showed an increase of 6.8 per cent over May, 1936.

RETAIL Trade FASTER

HOT WEATHER NEEDS AID

New York, July 9 (AP)—Most divisions of retail trade hit a faster pace this week, Dun & Bradstreet reported today. Hot weather needs and the attraction of price inducements helped sales, the survey said.

"Trade shows ushered in the fall wholesale season, with buyers encouraged to more liberal commitments by returns of early crop marketings," it added.

Stressing the retail turnover of seasonal goods, the review said:

"None of the leading centers of distribution failed to surpass their totals of the week preceding. As the buying pace at some of these was the most accelerated since early spring, the increase varied from 3 to 8 per cent.

"Spending of the soldiers' bonus money at this time last year, however, prevented the rise in the estimated volume of retail distribution over the corresponding 1936 week from exceeding 12 to 22 per cent.

"Buoyed by well-attended trade shows in several principal markets, most branches of the wholesale trade shifted to higher gear this week.

"Official opening of fall lines of women's suits and coats, hosiery, furniture, rugs, and homewares provided the propellant that spread activity to other divisions.

"With current expansion of consumer purchases dispelling anxiety regarding season-end carry-overs, some retailers have set fall budgets up 10 to 15 per cent from last year's.

"At most of the leading shoe-manufacturing centers operations increased. Still struggling with heavy backlogs, hardware plants in some sections were hampered by shortage of skilled labor. Strongest demand for lumber was from the furniture industry."

Pacific Mills Extends Curtailment

Pacific Mills is extending its curtailment program, in view of the extreme slackness in new business which preceded the more recent pickup in progress the past four business days. All cotton and rayon weaving mills except the small Lyman, S. C., unit are now, or will be, down a week.

The Dover, N. H., mills, and the finishing plant and rayon mill at Lawrence, Mass., are not running this week, and the mills at Manchester, N. H., and Columbia, S. C., will not operate the week of July 19. The finishing plant at Lyman is also curtailed, as it has been for some time. Only the worsted unit at Lawrence, other than the Lyman mill, is running on a normal schedule.

How Steel Trade May Benefit From Labor Troubles

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics, New York University

New York, July 9—It is even possible that its serious labor troubles may turn out to have been a blessing in disguise for the steel industry. Certainly, few observers seem to have had any thought that the strikes would have petered out so soon.

In the first place, radicalism in the American labor movement has been given a setback which will be a benefit to the country in general and to the steel industry in particular.

In the second place, the strikes tied up enough production of steel to be of considerable assistance in adjusting supply to demand. This has strengthened the technical position of the industry.

We must admit that in anticipation of strikes, a good deal of steel was bought ahead of requirements, and the actual coming of the strikes thus justified the existing condition. It prevented the pressure on the steel markets that might have come if the forward buying had proved to be a mistake.

So now, with the steel mills reopening, we find demand and supply in good balance, and prospects for the remainder of the year improved.

All along, it has seemed to me that one of the most reassuring developments in the business picture has been the way "unfilled orders" have held up. Instead of being cancelled, they have remained in force, thus showing that the buying was not mere wild speculation.

In addition, new buying has been sufficient to keep the back-log of unfilled orders from declining rapidly. All observers have agreed that new orders have run from 50 to 75 per cent of shipments, so that the existing unfilled orders would not be filled until fall. And by that time, business may be pointing up again.

• • •

Steel production in June fell 19 per cent below the May output, which is all that kept the total for the first half of 1937 from breaking the 1929 high record. Some people may see in this fact nothing but the large gain made since 1933. To my mind, however, it is more significant as a reminder that steel production is still considerably below the peak that it would be reasonable to expect. After all, 1929 was eight years ago, and since then, the population and its industrial equipment have naturally expanded, so that more steel would normally be required. In fact, at the old rate of growth, steel production in June was only about 92 per cent "normal."

• • •

Confirming the foregoing general indications, are the following more definite facts:

1—The price of steel scrap, which, next to pig iron, is the most important raw material used in manufacturing steel, has turned definitely upward. This rebound is doubly significant, since the price of scrap shows demand for steel and is also a sensitive leader among commodity prices.

2—The foreign demand for iron and steel is notably strong. England is calling for all scrap, and is reducing tariff duties on iron and steel imports. Several nations are increasing productive capacity. Our steel exports in May were enormous, and promise to increase. Clearly, if our domestic consumption were to decline the foreign markets would take up the slack.

3—The domestic demand, however, does not seem likely to decline much. General activity, as measured by railway carloadings, is increasing more than usual for the season, and this incidentally promises well for railway steel buying. Farm income and oil company earnings are two especially bright indications as to steel demand.

With rising volume and improved machinery, the leading integrated steel companies bid fair to overcome high labor and material costs and to show sustained good earnings.

Air Conditioning Orders Jump

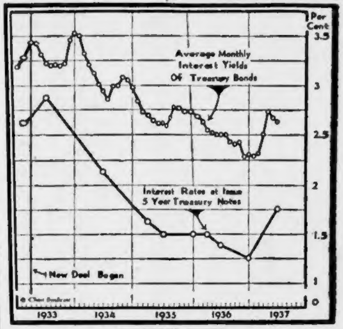
Orders booked for air conditioning systems and equipment in May were valued at $6,472,804, compared with $4,650,681 in the same month of last year, the Department of Commerce reported. In April these orders were valued at $6,538,431.

For the five-month period from January to May these orders were valued at $31,420,827 compared with $16,703,669 for the same period of last year, it was reported.

N. Y. Loan Bank Reports Profit

New York, July 9 (AP)—The Federal Home Loan Bank of New York, central credit agency for thrift and home financing institutions, reported today for the first six months net income of $267,106, compared with $211,861 in the comparable period a year ago. A balance of $69,496 was carride to surplus after payment of the 2 per cent semi-annual dividend.

U. S. PAYS MORE ON NOTES



On its latest issue of 5-year notes, the United States Treasury is paying interest of 1¾ per cent. The last previous 5-year note issue was brought out in December, 1936, at an interest rate of only 1¼ per cent.

Thus ended the long and favorable downtrend in interest rates which the New Deal administration experienced. Ever since its first 5-year notes were issued in June, 1933, at a rate of 2⅞ per cent, it benefited from declining money market rates.

An indication of the trend was supplied by the average monthly interest yields prevailing for outstanding 8-year Treasury bonds, based on prices. After being as low as 2.29 per cent at the beginning of this year, the yields rose sharply to 2.74 per cent by April, reflecting the decline in bond prices. The yields again declined by the first week of June to 2.63 per cent.

GOLD HOARD

Treasury May Utilize Some

Washington, July 9 (AP)—Fiscal authorities speculated today on the question of whether the Treasury may use part of its "frozen" $1,143,000,000 gold hoard to pare down federal debt.

The big supply of metal has accumulated since last December when the Treasury instituted its gold sterilization program.

The program was designed to keep the supply of credit stable through Treasury borrowing in amounts equal to gold inflows.

In this way, the government removed from the money market funds equivalent to those added by gold imports, thus maintaining a steady supply of lendable funds.

GOLD FLOW MAY DROP

Informed authorities said there are indications the gold flow to this country will drop sharply under the $5,000,000-a-day rate of the last few months.

If this occurs, they said, the Treasury may consider utilizing some of the gold already bought with borrowed money.

This could be done by issuing gold certificates against the metal to Federal Reserve banks. The certificates would be used to retire Treasury obligations held by the banks.

Officials said this operation would not tend toward credit inflation unless the reserve institutions exercised their authority to issue notes against the gold certificates and reinvested the money. Any reinvestment would send the funds into commercial banking channels, increasing their supply of lendable funds.

RESERVE HOLDINGS

George L. Harrison, president of the New York Federal Reserve Bank, called on Secretary Morgenthau yesterday. Officials said they discussed the possibility of retiring part of the reserve banks' $2,526,000,000 holdings of federal securities through the issuance of gold certificates.

It was emphasized, however, that no such action was likely in the next few weeks.

Treasury officials expressed hope the federal budget can be brought into approximate balance during this fiscal year by impounding 10 per cent of all except irreducible appropriations.

President Roosevelt received assurances yesterday from the heads of 28 independent federal agencies that they would make every effort to save the 10 per cent.

June Car Shipments Over Last Year

New York, July 9 (AP)—Increasing 12 per cent over last year, June shipments from United States and Canadian automobile factories totaled 525,983 units, the Automobile Manufacturers' Association reported today.

For the first six months shipments by the industry were estimated at 2,922,264 units, an increase of 13 per cent over the same period of 1936 and the largest first half volume ever reported by the industry, with the exception of the first six months of 1919. The figures include major motor car manufacturers except Ford Motor Car Company.

Commodity Prices Reach Highest Point Since May

By ERIC FRIEDHEIM
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Washington, July 9 — Weekly business review:

FOREIGN TRADE—Commerce Department experts this week held forth scant hope that the United States would export sufficient merchandise in 1937 to overcome the huge unfavorable trade balance piled up early in the year.

Although May shipments exceeded imports by $3,800,000, the preponderance of incoming merchandise and goods between January and April has given this country an unfavorable trade margin of more than $127,000,000.

At the end of May, 1936, the unfavorable trade balance was less than $5,000,000. Despite the maritime strike which paralyzed American shipping at the close of the year, the United States finally squeezed through with an export of approximately $40,000,000 for the 12-month period.

Commerce officials, however, feel that despite the heavy exports normally expected during the fall and early winter months, this country will be unable to close the wide gap between the export and import volume. This will give the United States its first unfavorable balance trade in nearly 50 years.

PRICES

Wholesale commodity prices rose substantially reaching the highest point since May, according to government reporting agencies. Sharp increases were noted in foods and farm products.

PRODUCTION — Steel output moved up during the past week as several plants reopened following settlement of labor disputes. Commerce estimates placed steel production at 77 per cent of capacity. A jump also was noted in automobile assemblies.

GOVERNMENT FINANCES—Some cessation of the heavy gold inflows into the United States was noted this week as a result of the reaffirmation of the tri-partite monetary agreement between the United States, Great Britain and France. Confidence by the French in the leadership of Finance Minister Georges Bonnet brought about a return movement of gold to that country.

The week's financial news also was marked by the Treasury's decision to engage in new weekly borrowing operations amounting to $50,000,000. Short term bills will be issued to raise the extra cash. The administration explained it is returning to its old policy of maintaining at least $1,000,000,000 in the federal cash balance.

May Be Last Earnings Report

New York, July 9 (AP)—What may be the last earnings report of Alleghany Corp., top holding company of the Van Sweringen rail system which it is proposed to merge with Chesapeake Corp., shows net loss for the six months ended June 30 of $65,990. This compares with net loss of $79,203 in the like period of 1936.

For the same period, Chesapeake Corp. reported net income of $3,579,142, inclusive of $1,586,864 profit from conversion of bonds into common stock of Chesapeake & Ohio Railway Co. This was equal to $1.99 a share on the capital stock outstanding.

In the like period of 1936, net was $3,582,296, or $1.99 a share.

Gold Output Up In May

World gold production during May, excluding Russia, was 2,467,000 fine ounces, against 2,362,000 in April and 2,277,000 in May, 1936, according to American Bureau of Metal Statistics.

Production for the first five months totaled 11,917,000 ounces, against 11,036,000 in the like 1936 period.

TAYLOR to Diplomatic POST?

WILL QUIT STEEL JOB

New York, July 9 (AP)—Wall Street, where the possibility of Myron C. Taylor's appointment to a diplomatic post has been long rumored, speculated today upon a newspaper report that he expects to retire January 1 as chairman of U. S. Steel Corporation. A company spokesman refused to confirm or deny the report.

In Florence, Italy where he is vacationing, Mr. Taylor said he could not comment on the report.

The New York Herald-Tribune said Taylor's retirement "is contingent on the completion of a financing and common stock dividend resumption program on which his heart is set.

"If this program is not carried through by the year end, he has indicated that he will continue as chairman until July 1, 1938, at the latest."

The newspaper said:

"It is scarcely a secret in Wall street that Mr. Taylor would be available for appointment as ambassador to the court of St. James if the present incumbent, Robert W. Bingham, should resign."

"Those intimate with the affairs of U. S. Steel," the Herald-Tribune said, "declare that Mr. Taylor's decision to retire was not forced on him by the bitter feeling which he stirred up in the steel industry in March of this year when he departed from the industry's traditional anti-union policy and arranged for the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation, a U. S. Steel subsidiary, to sign an agreement with the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Iron Workers of North America, a member of John L. Lewis' CIO family.

"Several of the independent steel producers are reputed to feel that Mr. Taylor let them down, not only because he made peace with Mr. Lewis, but also because, they charge, he failed to give them due warning of his intent to sign a union agreement," the paper added.

Concentrating Taylor's desire to achieve his ends in the financial affairs of the Steel Corporation, the newspaper said, "with the corporation's earnings showing up more favorably than they have since 1930, it is understood to be Mr. Taylor's conviction that, barring unforseen developments, he can see the financing and common dividend resumption plans consummated by the end of the year."

Paving the way is the steady progress made in clearing up arrearages on the preferred stock. Since the third quarter of last year when arrears totaled $18.25 a share, accumulations have been reduced to $1.25 a share. Last payment on the senior issue was $2 on June 29.

"Most frequently mentioned" as Taylor's successor as chairman of the steel corporation, the Herald-Tribune said, is 36-year-old Edward R. Stettinius, son of the late partner of J. P. Morgan Co. Co."

Since Taylor went to U. S. Steel in 1927 he has had a triple-action program. He eliminated the company's heavy bonded debt; he reorganized plant facilities, and he infused young blood into the organization.

Stettinius, top young man of the corporation, succeeded William J. Filbert as chairman of the finance committee, Jan. 1, 1935.

25 Years Ago

New York, July 9 (INS)—U. S. Steel second-quarter profit estimated at $23,500,000. Just under fixed charges and dividend requirements.

J. N. Hill, eldest son of James J. Hill, resigned as vice-president of Northern Pacific Ry.

Dust Bowl Outlook Good

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

If it is ever possible to wax sentimental over the cold facts of finance or the bloodless figures of statisticians, the time is now. For the outlook for the long-harassed dust bowl area is changed. No longer must the farmers there look forward glumly to a cropless fall.

True it is good for the country as a whole because it means elimination of a sour spot on the business map. But more important is the sympathetic pleasure with which everyone anticipates the area's return of prosperity. For after all the depression is not far behind any section of the country and to have had the misfortune of crop failures succeed the era of low prices was a real catastrophe. The latest Brookmire Income Map, calls for a change from poor to fair in the dust bowl with parts of it going from fair to good. All told it estimates that people's income in the area will, in the next six months, improve some 24 per cent over the comparable 1936 period. It is only a beginning, and probably not a spectacular one, but it is a change from conditions that could only spell impoverishment.

* * *

The wage-and-hour legislation is not making much progress in the Education and Labor Committee room. But since all eyes are on the floor battle on the court plan it is not surprising that little attention is paid to changes of importance that have been made in the original. The changes in fact are so sweeping that it is not an exaggeration to say that a new bill has practically been written by the committee. The wage and hour board can fix wages still. However, these must be made on the basis of local conditions and only up to 40 cents per hour. From there on collective bargaining reigns.

* * *

Such a revision constitutes a sharp curtailment in the original powers the bill's drafters intended to place with the board. On a 40-hour week basis it means that only those workers paid $16 and less would be under the jurisdiction of the board. And then it will have to contend with vagarise of comparative wages in various sections of the country.

* * *

The stock market should have had its expected reaction before this. The trouble apparently is that too many people expected a technical correction. The net result probably will be a lessening of such sentiment and then the reaction will take place when those looking for it give up hope. We would not do anything under such conditions on the principle that intermediate downtrends do not turn into uptrends in the space of one session. It takes time and after the shorts have been driven to cover investment buyers take their time by refusing to reach for stocks.

* * *

An instance of what we mean is supplied by U. S. Steel. Early today the stock eased about a point, then suddenly strengthened and moved back toward last night's close. There was some spirited bidding at one time that we simply could not picture as coming from investors. For this canny gentry are fully aware of the fact the issue has rebounded to a level one-half way between its high and the recent reaction low.

* * *

Notebook: At times we have mentioned individually a selected list of stocks that look to be in a better than average position . . . They are all either at or close to the top of their respective industries and as a whole provide good diversification. . They are Anaconda, Douglas, Sears, Westinghouse, Allied Stores, U. S. Steel, duPont and Glidden . . . Immediate buying is not advised . . . Our purpose in mentioning them is simply to have readers watch them on a reaction and if they behave satisfactorily purchases will be warranted.

To Pay Regular

Nehi Corp.

Irregular Tone to Market

New York, July 9—The stock market recovered from an easier trend this morning, then turned quiet and irregular, and so continued into the afternoon.

Farm implements, steels and a few individual issues led the modest rally in the first hour. The general list was about equally divided between plus and minus signs. Trading was slow.

U. S. Steel was typical of the market. It opened fractionally lower, increased to more than a point, then snapped back to around its previous close of 109½. Oliver Farm was up three points in a strong implement section. Motors, rubbers, oils and utilities were mixed. Rails drifted lower, Chesapeake and Ohio being down two points at one time.

Bonds were firm including Governments. Grains gained slightly while cotton added 20 cents a bale to yesterday's rise of $1.25.

CURRENT ITEMS

Among helpful market items was the week-end survey of Dun & Bradstreet which stressed a further expansion in retail sales throughout the country. Public spending was accelerated, it was said, partly by hot weather needs and by price inducements.

The increase in distribution over the preceding week amounted to from 3 to 8 per cent. Retailers were understood to have set fall budgets 10 to 15 per cent above last year.

Sterling was up ⅛ of a cent at $4.95½ at the beginning of foreign exchange transactions. The French franc was .00¼ of a cent higher at 3.86¾ cents.

Firm Rayon Market Is Expected

Although some curtailment in textile activity is expected during the summer months, the rayon industry looks forward to a firm demand well into the autumn, states the Rayon Organon, published by Textile Economics Bureau, Inc.

"Because of a short supply situation," it is stated, "rayon was not able to go on the consumption spree which has been experienced by some of the other fibers over the last nine months. Perhaps by reason of this situation, we find that stocks of rayon yarn are very low and that stocks of rayon woven goods are of easily manageable size.

"The fall weaving demand for rayon will be predicated on a large range of new fabrics—last season's fabrics, of which the stocks fortunately are low, may be passe. For these reasons of manageable cloth inventories, short yarn supply and the style nature of rayon goods, it is believed that the demand for rayon will continue to be very firm. And this is in spite of any unfavorable sympathetic reactions which might be expected in rayon demand as caused by the future reduced consumption of other fibers."

LEHMAN CORP.

Net Asset Value $40.18 a Share

New York, July 9 (AP)—Lehman Corp. today reported net asset value of its 2,081,580 capital shares resulting from the recent three-for-one split-up was $40.18 a share as of June 30.

The figure is after dividends aggregating $4.75 a share for the fiscal year and after normal federal and state taxes and management compensation, both computed upon unrealized appreciation, but before allowance for federal excess profits tax and undistributed profits surtax. Corresponding net asset value a year earlier was $39.75 a share after adjustment, giving effect to the three-for-one splitup.

Net earnings for the fiscal year ended June 30, including net realized profits on investments computed on the basis of average cost, totaled $12,479,339. Dividends declared and paid during the year aggregated $9,790,167.

Regular Dividends

Directors of Edgar P. Lewis & Sons, Inc., Malden candy manufacturers, declared regular quarterly dividend on its convertible preferred stock of 21¼ cents per share, payable to stock of record June 20.

'Van' Picture More Simplified

New York, July 9 (INS)—Complexities of the former $3,000,000,000 Van Sweringen railroad empire took on a more simplified picture today with the announcement by the directors of the Chesapeake Corporation and Alleghany Corporation that they had voted to merge the two holding companies into a new single corporation.

The merger will be effected through an exchange of securities in the old companies for those in the new.

Since taking control of the Van Sweringen network two months ago, Robert R. Young and his two associates, Frank Kirby and Frank Kolbe, have eliminated 19 holding companies from the setup.

Special stockholders' meetings for both Alleghany and the present Chesapeake Corporation, will vote on the merger August 17.

Still in the Red!

THE federal fiscal year ended on June 30. According to the Treasury statement we are still in the red—VERY MUCH IN THE RED—TOO DEEP IN THE RED for a country that has no great military establishment and is not in the war zone.

We are going into a deficit for the SEVENTH SUCCESSIVE YEAR. It is now $2,707,000,000.

The public debt MOUNTS. It is now $36,000,000,000.

This is a per capita debt of $240. That is, every man, woman and child in the country owes $240 that MUST BE PAID SOME DAY IN INCREASED TAXES.

President Roosevelt has made valiant attempts to close up the deficit and to pull the debt down, but the bureaucrats and the spenders in Congress have blocked all these attempts.

What will the next fiscal year show? Will there be another enormous deficit next June, with the debt rocketing toward the $45,000,000,000 DANGER LINE?

No private business could be run on such a financial basis. How long, then, can the greatest enterprise the world has ever known, the United States, continue to function in the interests of its people with a PERMANENT OUTLOOK FOR DEFICITS AND DEBTS?

We or the Caterpillars?

IF you visit a Massachusetts forest and see trees stripped bare, don't jump at the conclusion you're visiting a fire scene. It's more probable that gypsy moths have been there before you.

In all parts of the State you may find thousands of trees without a single leaf. Billions of crawling, greedy, voracious caterpillars are everywhere. Nothing, save perhaps the Biblical plague of locusts, could compare with the devastation.

Thus is brought forcibly home to us the eternal war that goes on between insect and man. For nearly 70 years we have fought the gypsy moth, ever since a Swiss naturalist brought two of them from Europe. Ten years ago we thought we had won. Now—well, look at the trees!

Here, surely, is a problem for our scientists. It amounts to a choice between ourselves and the caterpillars. So far, they are not doing badly.

Peter Arno Talks Sense

That's why what he says carries weight. It is especially interesting to the hundreds of New England boys and girls who aspire to riches via the drawing board.

"Don't think drawing is the short road to wealth," says Arno. "It isn't. You're lucky if you get $15 for a full page cartoon. It's true, I get $2000. The reason is that I have an established reputation, which just now happens to be the vogue."

There is an abundance of common sense in that statement. Imitating Arno, Gibson or any other artist doesn't spell success.

Bathtub or Seashore?

THE "drowning days" are with us again.

They come each year as mid-summer temperatures send thousands of New Englanders to beaches, lakes and rivers.

Almost every edition of the newspaper brings new accounts of those that went to the water for enjoyment and found death instead.

It is worthwhile to read this type of obituary. If we are wise, we shall profit by the experience of others.

If we have reason to question the durability of our hearts we are foolish to give them the cold water test. The family bathtub, nicely warmed, will be much safer.

And for the vast majority of us, any water that rises above our shoulders is DANGEROUS water. It is a good plan always to restrict bathing to approved or patrolled beaches, and, when there, TO KEEP NEAR THE SHORE.

How to Live to Be 100

WHEN you consider the gauntlet of diseases which a human being has to run to live, living to be 100 years old is a truly remarkable achievement.

Consequently, it is worth while to take an occasional look at the recipes for longevity that centenarians give us.

"Marry at 25," says Mr. O'Connor, "have at least eight children, then let the rest of things take care of themselves."

Not bad advice, that. Not everybody can have eight children, but everybody can and SHOULD avoid needless worry, to which Mr. O'Connor undoubtedly refers when he recommends letting "things take care of themselves."

A Fitting Memorial

WE doff our hat to Ann Marsters, this newspaper's young girl reporter. Apparently we're not alone, for Hollywood is doing a bit of hat doffing, too.

Ann, as you remember, was among the first to suggest that film audiences have an opportunity to see the late Jean Harlow's last picture. At the time plans had been made to discard the almost completed movie, titled "Saratoga."

Thousands of readers wrote to Ann. There was no doubt about it; they wanted to see Jean again.

And now they will. "Saratoga," with another actress in Jean's few unfinished scenes, is to be released this month in Boston.

It is a real victory, this—for Ann and the thousands that joined her crusade. It is also a fitting memorial to one of filmland's most beloved stars.

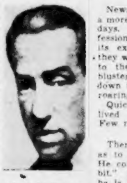
New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, July 9—Thoughts while strolling: Italy before Mussolini—strikes, strikes and nothing but strikes.



O. O. McIntyre

Trigger stuff: A perfume already marketed in honor of the Windsor Duchess. Add talented redheads: Burgess Meredith. No Comedian can look so utterly goofy as Bert Lahr. Name any popular song of the past 25 years and the A. P.'s Kent Cooper can play it on the piano by ear.

Talent with out-standing ears: Noel Coward, Fred Astaire and Clark Gable. To put over a song, I'll still take Sophie Tucker and Harry Richman. George Abbott has taken George S. Kaufman's place as the theater's No. 1 Miracle Man. That twinkly Lois Long smile.

Not many masters of ceremony can top George Jessel in flossing up an introduction. Frank Chapman is almost out-duding Lucius Beebe these days. Dr. Raymond L. Ditmars, the zoo reptile expert. Once a newspaperman himself, Edwin Balmer doesn't walk, he zooms.

Rhyme: Whiskers by Billy De Beck are the funniest. By Heck! When a great man dies, I think of the poet's line about Lincoln: "A giant oak toppled and left a void against the sky." The town always seems just a little bit livelier when Gene Fowler is in our midst. And that's personality.

Broadway after quite a lapse, has heard from Ned Welsh, once a roaming reporter on the old Morning Telegraph. He was always where the crowds were thickest and lights brightest. Thus Time Marches On!

Today he is a florist in Boston, catering flowers to staid old Beacon Hill families, puttering around his greenhouses and motoring every night to a farm in Essex where he raises collies and pheasants.

Welsh was contemporaneous with Charlie Somerville, who covered Broadway for the Morning World. Somerville was the first journalist to sport a gold-headed cane, a gift to him from the actor, Sir Forbes-Robertson.

In those days the long bar of the Hotel Marlborough was a rendezvous for journalistic aristocrats. Across the way was the Herald, which contributed its quota to the Marlborough trade.

Newspapering somehow seemed a more enchanted calling in those days. Crack men of the profession cared only for life and its excitements. To the world they were models of modesty, but to their fellows they had the bluster of Edmund Kean, setting down tankards with a bang and roaring contempt for city editors.

There are many conjectures as to the age of Major Bowes. He confesses to "50 and a little bit." My private guess is that he is flirting with the late 50's. But few wear years so lightly. He has the enthusiasm of the 20's, plus the energies of the 30's. He goes through his mail personally, being a block reader who digests a page at a glance.

Nobody with a legitimate right fails to see him and he answers all telephone calls. He carries on a regular system of exercise, but lately due to the high pressure of duties has had to curtail social engagements. He accepts but one dinner engagement a week.

Maiden Lane always seemed to me the most attractively named thoroughfare in the metropolis. Once it was lined almost solidly with jewelry establishments. There are such stores there today, but a large number have joined the hegira uptown to the new jewelry district in the 40's. It used to be a stunt in the old Maiden Lane days to sidle up slowly to a jewelry shop window and glance about furtively.

Almost magic-like, there would appear out of nowhere, a detective on either side to see that no window was bricked or any other thieving trickery indulged.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

"Human beings, both male and female, are restless, curious, given to adventuring.

Elsie Robinson

"Marriage, though an excellent institution, is monotonous, fraught with responsibility, and should not be attempted unless both parties are prepared for it.

"Marriage can never be happy or lasting until restlessness and curiosity have given way to stability — in both parties.

"Therefore, women as well as men should sow their wild oats before marriage—thus eliminating their emotional instability.

"And no man should marry until he or she feels ready for marriage; until craving for change and adventure has given place, by a natural process of evolution, to a taste of stability, unity and sentimental repose."

Thus once wrote a confident young man who, years later, was to be known as Monsieur Leon Blum, Premier of France. Now these remarks—and many others even more amazing, have been published by Lippincott under the title "MARRIAGE."

IS HE BLUSHING

It is said that Mons. Blum is considerably embarrassed thereby. If so, one hardly wonders! This is hardly a document which a famous gentleman, with political ambitions and a charming wife, would desire to have broadcast.

"Sow your wild oats first and you'll be happy in marriage"—such is the premise on which the young Leon based his book. Which simply shows how little he knew of Nature.

Reluctant as the moralist may be to admit it, wild oats are exciting and marriage isn't. Marriage is beyond argument the noblest career for a woman—but it is also the most monotonous . . . and the one most contrary to her natural instincts. For marriage, as Monsieur Blum himself admits, implies staying put. Which is the last thing on earth any normal female desires to do.

Sentimental tradition to the contrary, women are the excitement seekers . . . the rebels and experimenters . . . the non-conformists . . . the restless sex.

CAN'T SETTLE DOWN

Once let a girl acquire an appetite for philandering, and she is ruined for the dull and prosy program of matrimony.

"But men," you may protest, "aren't ruined for marriage because they have sowed their wild oats. Men settle down and become faithful husbands and fine fathers. Then why can't women do the same?"

Women cannot settle down as men do—for two reasons. First, Nature has a far deeper clutch on women than on men. The philandering habit, once acquired, is far harder for a women to break than for a man. She glories more in the excitement of the chase. Her egotism is more flattered by the scalps she collects.

Also, a man has other interests in life-compensating excitements in business and politics, the arts and sciences—which few women ever experience.

It's one or the other. In no function of life is it so tragically true that "you can't have your cake and eat it both."

That's That

Official announcement that Albert Dyer, a WPA crossing guard, has confessed the revolting crime which took the lives of three little schoolgirls in Inglewood, Calif., must have lifted an appalling burden of fear from the parents of other children in that community. With such a fiend at large, no father or mother could have a moment's peace of mind.

The confession attributed to Dyer does sound incredible. But the slaying of those three little girls and the ravishing of their dead bodies were incredible crimes, too. They were outrages which just couldn't have been perpetrated in any civilized community. But they were perpetrated. And they were the work of some monster in human form.

Now that the authorities have a confession, what are they going to do with the fiend who admits these revolting crimes? Every sense of human decency cries out for vengeance. Orderly government requires that the slayer be protected from lynching by a mob of infuriated citizens. If he is tried according to law, insanity probably will be his defense. No other defense is possible.

Sane or insane, it would be a crime against society to preserve the life of such a monster. Exterminating him will not restore his victims to life, but it will insure that no other child falls a victim to his uncontrolled desires.

One may smile when reading of the ceremonies in Tokio where Japanese Buddist priests offered prayers for the souls of 100,000 bullfrogs sacrificed during the last year for experimental purposes. The Buddists believe all things, animate or inanimate, have souls. They may be correct. It is easier to believe in the spiritual qualities of a bullfrog than in those of that Inglewood man.

President Roosevelt, proclaiming the period from September 17, 1937, to April 30, 1939, as one of celebrating the 150th anniversary of the birth of the Constitution, described the Constitution as "an enduring instrument fit to govern a great and varied population as it did a small agrarian nation at the start.

Both the endurance and the sufficiency of the Constitution already have been demonstrated.

Of all the governmental systems in operation when the Constitution was ratified ours is about the only one that has survived.

American railroads calculate that they use 600 billion gallons of water annually. That is a lot of water. But the most important thing about it is that none is destroyed or consumed. A railroad engine, the same as an irrigated farm, merely USES the water. In one way or another, that water is returned to earth again to be used over and over.

Bible Text: "But the word of the Lord endureth forever."—St. Peter i, 25.

A Cultured Pugilist

The Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

Word drifts into this workbench that Gene Tunney is becoming a cloistered literary ascetic; that any slovenly or indecorous solecism of speech hurts him more than did a Dempsey haymaker in the old days; that he is deep in some new annotations of Shakespeare; that he soon will go to England to find scholastic calm, to pursue these researches.

Edwin C. Hill

With all that has been written about Mr. Tunney's meanderings in the Groves of Academe, the story is not new. Many maulers have turned to the arts and to culture, without benefit of press agents, or, one way or another, have moved up into monocle and lorgnette circles.

Some of them will be cited here, but first off there's John Heenan, the "Benicia Boy," of Tunney's height and build and somewhat of his social demeanor—winning the world title, but never getting it, and thereafter mixing in the great European salons with ease and elegance.

Heenan was born of Irish parents in 1834, at the naval base at West Troy, New York. He was a personable, likeable lad, engaging in some impromptu bare-knuckle mauling and disclosing talents which quickly advanced him to title rank.

A FISTIC ORGY

In the spring of 1860 London flared out with posters, "Great Internationalist Contest Between Tom Sayres and John Heenan at Farnsborough, England, April 17, 1860."

In the 37th round, Heenan had Sayres hanging on the ropes. He was a heady fighter, but had taken terriffic punishment and he apparently suffered a mental lapse for he started choking Sayres. The crowd boiled into the ring, howling like wolves, and tore him from the limp and half-recumbent Sayres. The bobbies rushed in and got things under control, and there were several added rounds without a referee. Both fighters were sinking to the floor at the end, and both nations bellowed angrily that their man had won. At any rate, it was called a draw.

The great British literati had been at the ringside—then, as now—and among them was William Makepeace Thackery, who indulged in a bit of stately and condescending spoofing, as one of the star reporters, much in the vein of latter-day sports writers who turn literary.

John got to know these Olympians, and there he met one of the most dazzling and altogether orchidaceous sirens of all time—not even barring her brilliant and versatile contemporary, Lola Montez.

She was Dolores Adios McCord—saved from the Indians, to become Mrs. Adah Isaacs Menken, light opera star, ballet dancer, heroine of "Mazeppa," dramatic star with Booth, international heart-breaker, and the reigning devastation of London and Paris salons.

HE MET SOCIETY

Swinburne, Rosetti, Dumas pere, Joaquin Miller, then being lionized in London and a dozen other garlanded immortals were her devotees. Her beauty was enchanting, she had the social savoir which the British always are so astonished to discover in a provincial like Wallis Simpson. Her beauty was enchanting and she had both wit and literary culture.

Dickens, Swinburne and Thackery were her warm personal friends. It was Dickens who shepherded John Heenan into intimate little West End gatherings among the famous and the rich and great of London. Dickens was Heenan's patron and friend. The lad had an easy, natural way with him. He learned to speak correctly, followed literature intelligently but took on no affectations of culture. Stuffy old Victorian England genuinely liked the Benicia Boy.

One day, the tall, handsome youth, muscles bulging under a skin-tight fawn-colored suit with big pearl buttons, advanced across an old chenille-hung rococo drawing room to meet the former Mrs. Adah Isaacs Menken. His composure ebbed and faded. He was incoherent.

* * *

They were married. From overseas came good wishes from Walt Whitman, whom Adah had floored with her fan and a smile before seizing England. They were happy in a little West End flat. There were no more rough edges on the Benecia Boy by this time. He moved at ease among the social and literary London sophisticates. When their child was born, John was quite befuddled with joy. Adah couldn't keep him from jouncing it. One day he tripped on a rug, and his huge frame fell on the infant. The boy was dead.

A TRAGIC END

Heartbroken, he withdrew from all the dazzle of London—faded out quietly. Adah Menken made a brief return to the stage, drifting down to the old Bowery Theter in New York, dying penniless. A wanton turn of fate, it seems, for the tattered old chronicles of the day all make them a lovable pair, deserving better.

On the Nail

By Benjamin DeCasseres

To Europe in 12 hours' flying at a height of six miles! Passengers sealed up in automatically-heated compartments!

Six miles is about 30,000 feet, from which the passengers, breathing from oxygen tanks, will get a glimpse of the Atlantic ocean such as a person on the moon might get through a powerful telescope.

These are great conquests that man is making: but for sheer pleasure it is still hard to beat a trip around the Horn in an old four-master, with the spray dousing you from head to foot, the wind pounding health into your eyes and cheeks, the boat creaking as if to split its sides and strange sea-birds a-perch the masts.

Does man really progress or is he ONLY IN A HURRY?

It now seems that the original modern constitutional Democrats were the North American Indians, particularly those of the Iroquois tribe. They recently held a meeting at the St. Regis Reservation on the United States-Canadian border.

They assert that six hundred years ago, at about the time England and Scotland were at death-grips, one We-Hin-Oh-Kwa gave to America, or at least as much of it as could interpret it from the smoke-signals, "A New Birth of Matchless Freedom."

The claim is made by Chief Thomas that the laws at that time promulgated by the Iroquois contained all the essential principles of the Ten Commandments, the Golden Rule and the American Constitution.

We are prone, in our hasty thinking, to call the American Indian in his native state a "savage," but modern research has brought to light the fact that if the Indians spurned civilization they had what is far higher—a CULTURE that bear a remarkable resemblance in religions, laws and the arts to many Asiatic and European cultures of an early date.

Caesar Augustus, founder of the mighty Roman Empire, will in a few days stand—or at least his shade will—on the heights overlooking Monte Carlo. He will hear his fame and deeds acclaimed by representatives of all the Mediterranean peoples.

This month is the 2000th anniversary of the birth of the man of whom it was said he found Rome "a city of brick and left it a city of marble."

Caesar Augustus finished off Mark Antony and Cleopatra and left their epical love story for Shakespeare to tell. Voltaire didn't like Augustus because, he said, he destroyed personal liberty. Gibbon, in his "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire," said Augustus was a "subtle tyrant" who gave to the people "only an image of civil liberty."

He was, however, a great patron of the arts and literature. Horace, Virgil, Livy and Ovid flourished under him. Just to show you how modern he really was, when there was a deficit in the treasury he, according to Gibbon, levied a five per cent tax ON ALL LEGACIES AND INHERITANCES.

"Dropping the Pilot," is the most famous of cartoons. Printed in London Punch when the present ex-Kaiser ascended the German throne, it showed the latter, as captain of a boat, getting rid of Bismarck, the Iron Chancellor of the Empire. The title became famous because of its universal application.

Don't drop YOUR personal pilot, which is REASON. America must never drop HER pilot—which is PERSONAL LIBERTY. In European affairs our pilot is named KEEP OUT. The American people MUST NOT drop him!
